48 Rescued From Plane Adrift in Gale at Sea

Coast Guardsmen Continue Efforts To Save 21 Still Aboard Flying Boat

New York, Oct. 14.—Weary Coast Guard crews, fighting waves two stories high, tonight rescued 48 of the 69 persons aboard a giant Boeing flying boat, wallowing for more than 12 hours approximately 820 miles off the Newfoundland coast.

[A man and a woman formerly stationed in Washington and the sister of a Clinton, Md., woman were listed among the passengers. They were:

[Miss Johanna von Goeschingk, 39, an employe of United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration here in 1944 and 1945; Albert E. Ritchie, former second secretary of the Canadian Embassy, and Miss Mary Gandy, of London, who was on her way to visit her sisters, Mrs. W. C. Schroeder, at Clinton.]

Coast Guard Makes 5 Trips

While mid-Atlantic night winds of gale force whined around the leaking hulk of the plane, the Bermuda Sky Queen, Coast Guardsmen made five trips to the craft, removing 48 persons to the safety of the weather ship Bibb.

The Coast Guard here reported in a message received at 6:54 p.m. (EST) that it would "be necessary to make three more successful trips tonight bringing seven persons on each trip" before the final rescue work could be accomplished.

This was likely to "take the balance of the night," the message read.

Thus far no injuries or deaths have been reported.

Life Raft Overturned

The message from the Bibb, however, said one of the survivors on the last rescue mission apparently overturned one of the life rafts bringing survivors back to the Bibb.

"Last party of survivors was removed from submerged raft and swamped boat," the message said.

Previous messages told of removing groups of 40, 21 and 3 persons from the plane, all of them prostrated by seasickness and including children and infants.

The Bermuda Sky Queen took off during the night from Shannon Airport, Eire, for Newfoundland, but ran short of fuel about 5:05 a. m. after battling heavy headwinds of the flight.

Capt. Charles Martin, pilot of the craft, then made a forced landing on the storm-swept waters and taxied the plane nearly three miles to the side of the bibb.

The 6:54 p. m. message from the weather ship said the "pilot's landing was incomparable."

Stocks Advance $1 to $5 a Share In Lively Trade

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Buyers surged into the stock market today and lifted leading issues $1 to better than $5 a share on one of the broadest and liveliest sessions of the past year or so.

Brokers attributed renewed demand for steels, motors, oils, rails and widespread industrials mainly to the belief that the domestic business picture was much brighter than generally realized and that apprehension over foreign affairs possibly had been exaggerated. Soaring commodities in recent months, it was suggested, has resulted in neglected securities.

At new highs for 1947 were Youngstown Sheet, Lukens Steel, Chrysler, Hudson Motors, American Smelting, Warren Petroleum, Mission Corp., and International Paper.

Volume for the five hours of 1,810,000 shares was the largest since last May 19. Individual issues appearing on the ticker tape numbered 1096, equaling the total of September 11 a year ago, which was the second highest on record. There were 757 advances, 183 declines and 156 stocks unchanged.

Speaking Frankly

Sick President's Lack of Preparation For Yalta Conference Dismayed Byrnes

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes's "Speaking Frankly"—six of fifteen chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers. Copyright 1947 by James F. Byrnes Foundation (A Charitable Trust).

By James F. Byrnes

DURING Christmas week of 1944, I was in the President's study talking to him about the shipping problem. As he looked up from the memorandum I had given him, he said:

"Jimmy, I want you to go with me on this trip to the Crimea."

It was a complete surprise. He had talked with me about the forthcoming meeting with Stalin and Churchill a number of times, but there had been no hint that I should be a member of the party.

"You know what went on at the other meetings," he added, "and as director of mobilization you have acquired a knowledge of our domestic situation that will be of great service in settling the economic questions that are certain to come up."

"When you are out of town," I told him, "the machinery doesn't stop. Problems like the one we are now discussing constantly arise. I think I should remain here and work on those problems."

He insisted, however, that I should go. I agreed, but was not happy about it.

We did not discuss it again until the day scheduled for our departure. That afternoon the OWMR staff met to discuss the problems that were expected to arise during my absence. The discussion convinced me more than ever that I should not go. I left the meeting and went over to see the President. He was having his hair cut by John Mays, the colored man who has greeted guests at the front door of the White House on all formal occasions for 36 years. Mays came to the White House from South Carolina during the administration of President Taft, and ever since has acted as barber and enjoyed the confidence of the residents of the White House.

He is not only courteous and dignified, he is wise and discreet.

AS MAYS continued clipping, I again urged that I should remain in Washington. I outlined the problems we anticipated during the month he would be away. He had been so absorbed in foreign affairs he did not appreciate the number of questions and decisions then devolving on the Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion. In fact, I had tried, in so far as possible, to keep domestic issues from intruding upon his consideration of foreign problems. The President persisted in his view that I should go, and I finally agreed. That night we left for Norfolk, where in the early morning darkness of January 23, we boarded the heavy cruiser USS Quincy, which was to take us as far as Malta.

When he left Washington the President was suffering from a severe cold. On board ship it grew worse and he stayed in his cabin most of the time. He would come to lunch and dinner and after dinner attend a moving picture. But only once or twice was he able to sit on deck, until we reached the Mediterranean.

We were at sea on the President's birthday, January 30, and his daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, made the birthday dinner a gala occasion. Gifts purchased from the ship's commissary were presented to the President. His devoted Filipino chef insisted on providing a birthday cake. But others had the same idea. The commissioned officers presented one; so did the enlisted men and the warrant officers. When four cakes arrived, one of our group, who remembered that the President had just been inaugurated to serve a fourth term, went out and procured a fifth cake. A large candle was stuck into it, which the President was challenged to blow out.

Although he responded to the gaiety of the occasion, I was disturbed by his appearance. I feared his illness was not due entirely to a cold and expressed this concern to Mrs. Boettiger. She thought my opinion arose from observing him during the moving pictures, when she usually sat on one side of the President and I on the other. She explained that, while looking at the pictures, the President would have his mouth open because of his sinus trouble and that this made him look badly, but he was not really ill. Dr. McIntire also expressed the belief that the President's appearance was due to the combination of sinus infection and cold. Since he had so often "bounced back" after an illness, I dismissed my fears.

BY THE time we reached Malta he had improved greatly. As the Quincy approached its anchorage we saw Prime Minister Churchill, in navy uniform, waving a greeting to the President from the deck of the H. M. S. Sirius across the channel. Shortly thereafter he and his daughter, Section Officer Sarah Oliver, came aboard for lunch. There were ten of us at lunch and discussion of the approaching conference was only general. The President did, however, confide to Churchill his plans to visit King Ibn Saud on his return trip to discuss the Palestine question. He wanted to bring about peace between the Arabs and the Jews. Churchill wished him good luck but didn't seem very hopeful that the President would meet with success. He didn't.

That night the President traveled for the first time in the Sacred Cow. Months earlier I had tried to induce him to use this airplane, built for his use and provided with an elevator which could be lowered from the plane to the ground, for his trips to Hyde Park and Warm Springs. He told me he disliked to fly; he disliked the monotony of looking at the clouds. His other objection was more surprising. He thought an unnecessary expense had been incurred in fitting a plane solely for his personal use. He said he had not been consulted about it and he did not approve it. This from a man who often had been accused of being the greatest spender ever to hold office of President!

So far as I could see, the President had made little preparation for the Yalta Conference. His inauguration had taken place the Saturday before we left and for ten days preceding that he had been overwhelmed with engagements. On the cruiser the President, Admiral Leahy and I, on four or five occasions, usually after dinner, discussed some of the questions to be considered, particularly the proposal for the United Nations. But not until the day before we landed at Malta did I learn that we had on board a very complete file of studies and recommendations prepared by the State Department. I asked the President if the department had given him any material and he advised me it was all in the custody of Lieutenant William M. Rigdon. Later, when I saw some of these splendid studies I greatly regretted they had not been considered on board ship. I am sure the failure to study them while en route was due to the President's illness. And I am sure that only President Roosevelt, with his intimate knowledge of the problems, could have handled the situation so well with so little preparation.

James F. Byrnes' personal account of the conferences, discussions and deliberations that fixed American foreign policy while he was Secretary of State is one of the most extraordinary disclosures of history-in-the-making that the people ever have obtained from a statesman in his lifetime. What Mr. Byrnes has put into these careful accounts ordinarily is consigned to the archives to emerge after the lapse of decades. Through these papers American citizens can gain insight into the foreign policy of their Government and achieve a new understanding of the momentous developments that are shaping their lives.

SECRETARY of State Edward R. Stettinius, who had gone ahead by air, joined us at Malta. We were met also by Mr. Hopkins, who had been visiting in London, Paris and Rome. Harry was sick. He took off for Yalta in the first available airplane and during the conference was confined to his bed most of the time. His great courage caused him to attend every session of the conference, but immediately after adjournment he would retire to his room. Members of our delegation frequently held meetings there because Dr. McIntire insisted he remain in bed.

There were some uneasy minds in our party as we took off from Malta. Our pilots were unfamiliar with the airfield at Saki, where, we understood, there had been a considerable snowfall. We had conflicting reports on the hazards of the drive from Saki across the mountains to Yalta. There also was some fear of typhus, as we were told the Germans had left the place infested with vermin.

These worries were based on an underestimation of the prodigious effort the Russians exerted to demonstrate their hospitality. The landing strip at Saki was swept clear of every snowflake. The road from the field to Yalta, 80 miles away, was guarded by an unbroken line of Soviet troops, many of them girls—girls with guns. Livadia Palace, which was our headquarters and the scene of the meetings, was immaculate. We were told the Germans had completely ransacked it, leaving behind only two paintings out of all the furnishings in the huge building which had been a summer home of the Czars. Although some of the conveniences we fortunate Americans are accustomed to were missing, the Russians, with only three weeks advance notice, had done an amazing job in completely renovating the place.

As we were shown to our rooms we were told what they had been used for when the Czars were in residence. We soon learned Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King had been assigned to the Czarina's boudoir. He was reminded of it throughout the conference.

In a second installment, to be published tomorrow, Mr. Byrnes describes the opening of the Yalta Conference. Allied armies were driving across Germany's frontiers and the statesmen in the Crimea were concerned first of all with the setting up of a Control Council for Germany and with the problem of reparations. In tomorrow's installment Mr. Byrnes quotes from the discussion of these issues by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

Plan for Little Assembly Hit By Russians

Vishinsky Claims American Proposal For Interim Group Weakens Council

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 14.—American proposals for a "little assembly" met instant skepticism today as being a veiled attempt to infringe on the work of the United Nations' Security Council.

John Foster Dulles assured the Assembly's Political Committee on its first day of debating this issue that his resolution would not invade the authority of the Security Council.

In fact, as Dulles explained the proposal, it did not live up to its unofficial name as a year-'round "Little Assembly" which Secretary Marshall outlined as one of four vital issues facing the United Nations. Dulles pictured it as nothing more than a 57-nation "interim committee," with limited functions to meet when the Assembly was not in session.

Candor Doubted

The candor of the United States Government was doubted by Andrei Vishinsky of Russia, who declared its purpose was to make an "empty shell" of the stalemated Security Council.

However, even as a measure that might overlap into the Council's work, it was partially indorsed by Australia, Bolivia and the Dominican Republic.

Dulles presented his plea with a statement that the United Nations "can do better than it has yet done" to allay "widespread disillusionment." The United States, he declared, sees in this session of the assembly "an opportunity to regain the public confidence and the prestige needed for successful survival."

Functions Outlined

"If that opportunity is missed, it may not recur," said Dulles.

The interim committee would go a long way toward restoring that confidence, he said, in outlining these functions for it:

1. To consider matters concerning maintenance of international peace and security, and friendly relations among nations. They would be included in the agenda of the nextGeneral Assembly after investigation of the facts. The committee would also tell the assembly its views. The committee could recommend calling a special session of the assembly in an emergency.

2. To "follow through" decisions of the General Assembly which call for continuing attention on matters concerning international security.

3. To start any preliminary work needed to enable the General Assembly to make recommendations in matters affecting international peace and in the political field.

"Our proposal," said Dulles, "of course contemplates that the interim committee shall respect fully the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security. Thus, it would not study or deal with any dispute or situation which at the time are on the agenda of the Security Council."

The proposed committee, he added, would also refrain from encroaching on the work of the Atomic Energy Commission and the commission for Conventional Armaments.

Dulles Gives Warning

Dulles warned that the alternative was for the Assembly to remain in continuous session. "It is clear," he said, "that if for ten months of the year the doors of the Assembly are closed and Assembly work ceases, the Assembly will fall in its duty."

Vishinsky, who posed as the champion of equal rights for the small states during the Greek debate, today accused the United States of attempting to destroy Russia's righ to veto any proposal before he Security Council.

The Interim Committee, he declared, "is a by-pass channel" to leave the Security Council "high and dry without any life blood."

"For heavens sake," he exclaimed, "this is a farce. You're trying to set up a body more powerful than the Security Council. In order to calm down the fears of the teen-agers you're saying this will not interfere with the Security Council. Save that for the listen-

Lewis' Office Is Abolished By AFL Vote

13 Vice Presidencies Wiped Out to Give Eligibility in NLRB

San Francisco, Oct. 14 (AP).—The convention of the American Federation of Labor administered a crushing defeat to John L. Lewis tonight by voting to wipe out its 13 vice presidents in a move to make the entire Federation eligible to use the National Labor Relations Board.

The action came after a stormy and prolonged fight on the convention floor which saw the AFL's top leadership direct a bitter attack against Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, on his stand against signing non-Communist affidavits as required by the Taft-Hartley law.

The floor battle, which at times developed into heated personal exchanges, precipitated another o fthe famous Lewis "walks."

No Lewis Statement

The Mine Workers chief told the delegates he would not be a candidate again for the executive council if the resolution was passed. This would mean Lewis' voluntary withdrawal from the Federation's ruling body.

Lewis, leaving the convention hall after the decisive vote, told reporters he would have no further statement.

"I made my statement for tonight," he said, smiling and shaking hands with numerous delegates and well-wishers.

The momentous issue came on recommendations of the convention law committee. The committee report recommended adoption of action previously taken by the executive council which would abolish the offices of the 13 vice presidents and leave only President William Green and Secretary-Treasurer George Meany as federation "officers."

This was to permit the AFL officers to sign non-Communist affidavits for AFL Federal unions which have no national officers of their own.

Green Seeks Harmony

No union can utilize facilities of the NLRB unless its national officers—in this case, AFL officers—sign the affidavits. And President Green told the convention the issue was simply whether or not the AFL wanted "to preserve our Federal unions or let them die."

Without being able to use NLRB facilities, he declared, the Federal uions could be defeated by "outsiders and raiders."

"Some other union," he explained, would be able to get on the ballot (in voting to choose a union) and the Federal unions would not."

Kann Store Warehouse Fire Loss Is $100,000

Afternoon Blaze Seen by Thousands Downtown; Two Firemen Injured

A four-alarm fire, hiding i fury in its own dense smok yesterday afternoon destroyed th four-story reserve warehouse o S. Kann Sons Co. departme store at 314 8th st. nw.

Building and stock loss was es mated by a department store of cial at $100,000.

Two firemen fighting the infer in the heart of the downtown bu ness district, were hurt, neith seriously, by falling debris. T others were treated at the sce for smoke poisoning.

The blaze, breaking out short after 3 p. m., attracted thousar of spectators and brought out a proximately half of the city's fi apparatus.

Building Front Collapes

Spectacular height of the bla came at 3:45 p. m. when th building front, the first three floo of brick wall, fell downward wi a dull, ominous rumble.

The collapse showed spectato for the first time the fury of th flames inside which had eate away three floors and piled th building contents in a mass o soaked, smoking debris, high than the first floor level.

Ten minutes later, the buildi rear, upper wall gave way, clea ing the smoke and showing onl a gaping hole, roofed in by th fourth floor flooring.

It was but shortly after this th Fire Chief Clement Murphy d clared:

"It's only a matter of wettir things down, now."

Firemen were still doing th hours later.

Starts at Rug Pile

The blaze, apparently originatir in or near a pile of rugs on th third floor, was discovered by a stockroom employe, Robert Mu phy, 37, of Sandy Spring, Md., stock checker.

The first alarm was sounded at 3:14 p. m., the second but two minutes later. At 3:19 p. m., firemen put through a third alarm, and five minutes later the fourth and last alarm was sounded.

The two firemen treated for smoke poisoning on the scene were overcome early during the blaze, as they fought the flames inside the building, on the third floor. They were identified as Hosemen D. C. Howard and G. L. Larrick, both of Engine Company No. 2.

Fire apparatus choked the area from Pennsylvania ave. north to E st. and from 7th to 9th sts., inclusive. Pennsylvania ave. itself was kept clear for traffic, though spectators lined its sides, the trolley loading platform in the middle, and kept traffic police busy.

Thick side walls of the warehouse and companion walls to adjaining buildings kept the flames confined to the gutted building, but some water damage to stock of other stores was reported.

Louis Krupsaw, owner of the Lincoln Furniture Co., at 805-807 Market sp. nw., whose building backs on the Kann warehouse, said damage to his stock was "considerable."

A similar report was made by Robert C. Tillet, office manager of the Ford Photo Supply Co., northwest corner of 8th st. and Market sp. At a late hour, firemen were pumping a soapy-like mixture of water and photograph chemicals from the basement there.

Store's Business Continues

Business, however, went on as usual in the Kann department store, across 8th st., where a window dresser busied himself with his displays, apparently unmindful of the excitement across the street.

The blaze marked the second major fire for S. Kann Sons Co. On January 10, 1925, the $50,000, five-story warehouse building of the company and $175,000 in merchandise was destroyed, at 8th and D sts. nw. Eight firemen were hurt in that general-alarm fire.

The Nation-wide food conservation program is "beginning to hit its stride," Charles Luckman, chairman of President Truman's Citizens Food Committee, told the country yesterday.

After a morning session of the full committee, and an afternoon given over to meetings with representatives of the Nation's bakers, brewers and poultrymen, Luckman told newsmen:

1. That the baking industry is considering programs to do away with waste within the bakeries; reduce the size of bread loaves, and halt the practice of retailers returning day-old bread to the bakers.

Second Storm Moving Along Atlantic Coast

Hatteras, N. C., Oct. 14 (AP).—High winds and abnormal tides, accompanied by pouring rains, buffeted the thinly populated outer banks of North Carolina today, as the Caribbean-born storm hovered almost without forward motion some 70 miles off the coast, while a second storm center, possibly more threatening than the original, was developing to the southwest.

The storm apparently did some minor damage along the coast. Early reports indicated nothing serious. But before wheeling out of Florida it had taken three lives and wrought millions of dollars of damage to crops and property.

Storm warnings were hoisted from Charleston, S. C., to Delaware Breakwater. Gales of 50 to 60 miles an hour were predicted for tonight at Hatteras. A velocity of up to 55 miles an hour was reported earlier from Manteo on Roanoke Island.

Ships at sea were warned, however, there was danger of hurricane force winds in the path of the disturbance.

8 in 10 Commend Marshall For Job on Soviet Relations

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 14.—After nine months in office, Secretary of State George C. Marshall enjoys the support and good will of a substantial majority of his fellow citizens.

More than 8 out of every 10 polled by the Institute compliment him on the job he is doing in handling the State Department's toughest problem, relations with Russia. Only 2 per cent, or 1 person in 50, say he is doing a poor job.

This striking degree of good will tops even that enjoyed by Cordell Hull when he was Secretary of State in the Roosevelt Administration.

From coast-to-coast a cross-section of voters were asked by interviewers for the Institute:

Do you think Secretary of State George Marshall has been doing a good or a poor job in handling our relations with Russia?

The vote:

Good job	63%
Fair job	20	83%
Poor job	2
No opinion	15

At the time of the Marshall appointments early this year the Institute questionad American voters on what sort of policy they wanted to see the new Secretary adopt—a policy similar to that of his predecessor James F. Byrnes, a firmer policy, or a softer one toward Russia.

The vote was:

Marshall should follow Byrnes policy	19%
Should be firmer	51
Should be softer	5
No opinion	25

President Truman and Secretary Marshall have been repeatedly accused of "imperialism" by Communists, who claim that the United States is out to dominate Europe.

Thus far that accusation has made little or no impression on the American people.

This is shown in the following Institute poll:

Do you think that in dealing with Russia and other countries the United States is insisting too much on having its own way?

Yes	12%

Mass. Cases Start Row

All Out-of-State Divorces At Stake in Supreme Court

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The well-being of everybody who ever went to another State to get a divorce was at stake in the Supreme Court yesterday.

Two Massachusetts people asked the justices to hold every such divorce open to attack in the home State. When the court answers, it is sure to do one of three things:

1. Declare a stable divorce doctrine, by which a divorce good where you get it is good everywhere; or

2. Make a divorced person's legal status depend on where he is. Then—as Justice Jackson put it—a man crossing a State line won't know whether he has a wife or a lawsuit; or

3. Dodge the issue and leave the present legal confusion to be cleared up some other time in some other case.

The argument over these courses brought on an all-day duel between Justices Jackson and Black on one side and Frankfurter, the Harvard law professor, on the other.

Jackson said it was up to the Supreme Court to clear up the mess that its conflicting decisions

Race Segregation 'Natural' Here, Newell Tells Citizens

Race segregation here is a "natural state" and certain groups which agitate against it are "unscrupulous" and "un-American," Clifford H. Newell, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said last night.

Newell, speaking before a meeting of the Brookland Citizens Association, predicted that Negroes who buy homes in white neighborhoods eventually will want to sell them back to whites and move away.

He advised his listeners as follows:

"If a colored person is unwise enough to move into your block, don't sell your home and move away. Social custom will assert itself, and I predict that after this agitation has expended itself, the colored man will want to sell back to his white friend and go back and live among his own people where he can better carry out his obligations to his race."

FPHA Fund Probe By Senate Looms

Committee Told Greenbelt Accounts Show Either 'Bookkeeping Error' or 'Defalcation'

A thorough probe of Federal Public Housing Authority funds loomed last night after a Senate committe was informed that there is either "a bookkeping error" or a "defalcation" amounting to $608,000 in the accounts of the Greenbelt, Md., housing project.

The Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures heard of the "unidentified debit" in the Greenbelt accounts from Stephen B. Ives, director of the corporation and audits division of the General Accounting Office.

After a day long hearing the committee left the matter of FPHA accounts open for further study.

Ives explained that the Greenbelt accounts were in bad shape when FPHA took over from the Farm Security Administration, and said there was no evidence of "any defalcations or irregularities."

Ferguson Charges 'Fraud'

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) sharply charged "fraud" when Ives disclosed that at least one "fictitous" entry of $26,250 had been made in FPHA books.

Ives said the entry had been made in the Atlanta FPHA office accounts "for painting and decorating in respect of a nonexistent commitment." He added:

"This entry, we understand, was made for the purpose of retaining an equivalent portion of the fund available for 1946 expense, for use as and when required in the next succeeding year."

Ferguson sharply interjected that this was "deliberate fraud."

"In other words," he said, "this entry was made so that the money wouldn't have to revert to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year and Congress wouldn't know that the money was there. Wasn't that a fraud?"

"It might have been," replied Ives, "but maybe a better word is irregularity."

"They wanted to deceive the Congress," retorted Ferguson. "That's a fraud. What more of a fraud could you have than an attempt to deceive Congress."

The hearings were called after the General Accounting Office reported on an audit of the books of FPHA. The audit, made on behalf of GAO, by a public accounting firm, was for the year 1944 and through uJne 30, 1946.

Since no previous audit had been made, however, it covered all previous years of FPHA administration.

"The accounting of FPHA was found to be inadequate, inaccurate and otherwise deficient," Ives reported.

When the GAO official disclosed the fact that Greenbelt's books were out of balance by $608,261, Senator osephJ R. McCarthy (R., Wisc.) interjected:

"Let's get this correct. It was either a mistake in bookkeeping or defalcation."

"That's right," Ives replied. "We may find out what it is."

MAN OF LETTERS OBLIGES—James F. Byrnes (center), former Secretary of States, autographs a copy of his new book, "Speaking Frankly," for Representative Joseph R. Bryson (D., S. C.). Mrs. Byrnes is with her husband at the reception yesterday in Spartanburg, S. C., Byrnes' home town, where the book was formally presented to the public home town. About 3000 persons crowded DuPre's Book Store to the doors and quite wore out Mr. Byrnes' writing hand in their eagerness to show their affection for him.

It was supposed to be just an autograph party. But the representative of Harper & Brothers, which is publishing Byrnes' book "Frankly Speaking," said she had never seen an autograph party quite like this one. "Three thousand people!" she exclaimed, "it's almost unbelievable."

To Dr. Henry Nelson Snyder, honorary president of Wofford College here, it wasn't a bit unbelievable. "He can do this anywhere in South Carolina," he said.

"The people here have loved and trusted him and he has never failed them."

It was a little like old home week for the man who came to Spartanburg back in 1925 to make it his residence.

"I am happy to launch this book from a city in which I lived and which has been so nice to me," Byrnes said.

He didn't mention that he had received about 200 invitations from other cities—most of them larger—to "launch this book."

He grinned mischievously and winked at this reporter when he said "Imagine what it would be like to do this in Brentano's back in Washington."

One Friend Buys 90 Copies

Even in Brentano's, however, it couldn't have been a more hectic afternoon. People came with three, five and eight books under their arm for autographs. A. B. Taylor, an old friend of Byrnes, bought 90 copies—but didn't ask to have them all autographed.

Mrs. Joseph T. Johnson, whose husband was a Congressman when Byrnes was first seated in the House, was on hand for the signing party. She recalled the days so many years ago when Byrnes was going into the Capitol grounds to be sworn in as a Representative. "That's the first time I ever saw him. Now I feel that he's just one of my boys."

Representative Joseph R. Bryson, who now represents the Fourth South Carolina District in Congress, was there to greet Jimmy and to tell him "this one's paid for" when he asked him to autograph his book.

Proceeds to School Orphans

There was some good-natured joshing of Don Russell, who served as Assistant Secretary of State under Byrnes. Russell showed up for pictures and Byrnes said he thought "Don ought to do some of the work here—after all he's getting all the money from this book." Proceeds are to be used for the James F. Byrnes' Foundation to finance scholarships for orphan boys and girls unable to afford an education.

It is hardly surprising that Byrnes should be interested in such a project. His own father died several months before he was born and he went to work at the age of 14 to support his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Byrnes, to whose memory his book is dedicated.

Byrnes was born in Charleston, S. C., and lived in Aiken before coming to Spartanburg. Back in Barnwell County, he is remembered as the man who, as circuit solicitor, first persuaded Barnwell County juries to regard attacks on Negroes as crimes and to accept for the first time the testimony of Negroes.

Fulfills a Promise

All over South Carolina, Jimmy Byrnes is remembered as the man who helped establish the legislative base for Federal aid to roads and who, in so doing, fulfilled a promise to his constituents that he would "do something about Carolina's road system."

Charlie Hearon, now a columnist for the Spartanburg Herald, recalled yesterday how he accompanied Byrnes to a State Fair after Byrnes had left the House of Representatives and before he had made his second race for the Senate.

"After watching him that day, shaking hands with everybody, I told him, 'Jimmy, you might as well run. I don't know anybody in the State who can put as many names on 'em as you can,'" Hearon said.

Byrnes' memory is almost infallible. When Sam Lanham, a member of the local bar, came up for his autograph, Byrnes shook hands with him and recalled that Lanham was one of the first men he had met when he came to Spartanburg more than 20 years ago. Then Sam Lanham introduced his Swiss wife, who has been in this country only two years and who made a little speech about how proud she was to meet Byrnes.

When asked what she thought of the author she replied: "He is, of course, an outstanding gentleman."

That was the genreal feeling of the townspeople, even though their enthusiasm for Byrnes was exhausting in its exuberance. But throughout the ordeal (and that was what it must have been after the first 2000 autographs) the slight, white-haired gentleman from South Carolina kept his good humor. When someone asked him if his dog Whisker was in the book, he said, "No, he isn't—and I still have to straighten that out with him."

On hand was lovely, white-haired Mrs. Maude Byrnes, who explained rather diffidently that "this is our first autograph party and I reolly don't know how to act."

There wer ethose at the party who could remember the story told on Mrs. Byrnes when her husband lost $1.50 in a poker game. She is supposed to have taught him to say:

"Poker is poisonous. It casts a poor man too much money and a busy man too much time."

The press of people in the store became so great as the afternoon wore on that store officials had to stand off the crowd in order to keep Byrnes from being literally swallowed up by the throngs of his admirers.

Va. Appeals Court Weighs Portsmouth Annexation Suit

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today heard arguments in Norfolk County's fight against a Portsmouth annexation suit to the State's highest tribunal.

Norfolk County brought a full-fledged assault against an annexation policy a year ago by the majority of a three-judge court which ruled in favor of Portsmouth in the city's anexation suit.

Under the annexation decree, Portsmouth will take in, as of December 31, two widely separated areas of Norfolk county; one of these is wholly residential, 1980 acres in size, with a population of 10,000 and property values of some $6,600,000, while the other is an industrial area of 1015 acres.

The lower court's decision, spokesmen for the county argued today, illustrates the "nebulous state" of Virginia's annexation laws. This county called upon the Supreme Court to say if it is the State's policy to permit the enlargement of city boundaries "regardless of the interest of the people and at the sole instance of the city officials then in office."

Portsmouth completed one annexation proceeding in 1909 and another in 1919, counsel for the county said.

The court today granted appeals in four cases and refused them in 14 others. Those granted were to:

George C. Washabaugh vs. Northern Virginia Construction Co., from Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Margaret G. Paddock vs. Leslie I. Mason, from Fauquier County Circuit Court.

Helen Moore Haywood vs. the Commonwealth, from Norfolk County Circuit Court.

John F. Ivory Storage Co., Inc., vs. Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co., from Hustings Court, Richmond.

Bessie M. Sears vs. Mrs. E. J. Michie, Norfolk City Circuit Court.

Effie H. Shelburne vs. Angie H. Parrott, Roanoke County Circuit Court.

Leicester Owens vs. John L. Owens, Portsmouth Circuit Court.

F. Broom vs. R. B. Stone, Portsmouth Circuit Court.

Benjamin Rhyne Wood vs. the Commonwealth, Richmond Hustings Court.

William E. Day vs. County Board of Arlington County, from Arlington County Circuit Court.

Camille Mirandi Caruana vs. James Caruana, Norfolk City Circuit Court.

Grady Dingus and Murtie Dingus vs. Irene Mullins, Dickinson County Circuit Court.

Eloise Bialock vs. Charles Riddick, Norfolk City Circuit Court.

Nimitz Plans Retirement In December

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 14 (AP).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today he would retire from active naval duty in mid-December.

The admiral said he planned to retire to the West Coast and said he would be available for any service the President might desire except that he would not accept a diplomatic appointment.

He said that he had recommended his successor as Chief of Naval Operations to President Truman, but that he was not at liberty to disclose his recommendation.

Admiral Nimitz named five admirals as among those eligible to succeed him. They were William H. P. Blandy, commander of the Atlantic Fleet; Louis Denfeld, commander of the Pacific Fleet; D. C. Ramsey, vice Chief of Naval Operations; Richard L. Connolly, commander of the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets, and C. M. Cooke, naval commander in the China theater.

"I would like to keep contacts with th active Navy at a large port such as San Francisco," he said. "I will travel some, visit friends and relatives, and be available for any service for which the President may see fit to use me."

He said, however, he would not accept a diplomatic appointment.

The veteran Navy man pointed out he had passed the regular retirement age of 62 last February 29. But under a new law all general of the Army retire but technically remain on active duty status for life.

Admiral Nimitz is in Texas to address a State fair crowd on All Veterans Day.

He said, in a speech prepared for delivery, that international society had reached "the comparable position of life in the frontier days, when each family contributed to the maintenance of the police force but also kept its own guns loaded and handy."

He said the United States Navy would be ready for an emergency, but warned against further limitation of armaments.

He described the United Nations Organization as "untried."

Socony Fears Oil Shortage, Gas Rationing

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—A. L. Nickerson, marketing director for Socony Vacuum Oil Co., told a meeting of the Empire State Petroleum Association here that new Federal demands on available gasoline and fuel oil would almost certainly lead to rationing of petroleum products in the East this winter.

He said the industry could no hope to recover from the handicap of the war and cach up with increasing demands under two o three years and urged trade group to call on President Truman to issue a proclamation urging conservation of all fuel products.

The industry will have to discourage prospective customers from converting to oil from any other fuel, he said. "The supply outlook in the East has taken a marked turn for the worse," Nickerson declared.

Soviet Designers Veto Trend to Long Dresses

Moscow, Oct. 14 (NY HT).—Soviet fashion designers, upholding national traditions, vetoed today the western trend toward long dresses.

Coats and frocks displayed at a fashion preview of what the Soviet woman will wear next year adhered to the Soviet preference for short clothes.

One of the reasons given for the Soviet refusal to go along with the west was that shorter garments allow greater mobility.

However, there was a slight concession: New Soviet dresses will be from two to three inches below the knee. This represents a slight fall from the wartime, knee-length high.

Landlord Learns He Has No 'Ceiling'

Apartment Owner Denied Rent Boost Until Scale Is Set

District Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson yesterday dismissed hearings on a proposed rent increase for apartments at 5112 Connecticut ave. nw. because no ceilings had been placed on them.

Owners of the property, E. M. Willis & Sons, said they would file a schedule of ceilings as soon as they can determine what the rentals should be.

John Willis said they were unaware until yesterday at the hearing that ceilings had never been filed. The apartment house had been a cooperative for some years before it was purchased by the H. L. Rust Co., who sold it to E. M. Willis and Sons last summer, he said.

His firm thought that ceilings, based on rentals as of January, 1941, had been filed even before the cooperative had taken over in the interim period, according to Willis.

The owners had asked for increases ranging up to 28 per cent on the 35 units, which rent from $45 to $60 a month. Tyson said he could not act on an adjustment of rates until ceilings were established.

Act of 1947."

Last Thursday, however, Creedon approved a recommendation for a 5 per cent rent increase for the Louisville, Ky., area. At that time, his information director said Creedon had been advised by his legal counsel that he had no authority to reverse local board proposals unless they were "clearly arbitrary and capricious."

Truman Supported Stand

And at a press conference the same day, President Truman twice backed up his Housing Expediter in this interpretation of the law. He stated flatly that Creedon had no discretion under the law—that he was powerless to reject the recommendations of the rent advisory boards in each defense-rental area.

The decision in the Louisville situation aroused a storm of controversy, particularly from union and consumer groups. Led off by President Harvey W. Brown, of the Independent Machinists' Union, critics shouted that the Housing Expediter need not be a "rubber stamp." They pointed out that the law obliged him to approve local boards' recommendations only if they were "appropriately substantiated and in accordance with applicable law and regulations."

No Reversal of Policy

It was this quotation from the act which Creedon cited yesterday in rejecting the Clovis Rent Advisory Board recommendation. But he insisted to newsmen that his decision was no reversal of his previous action in the Louisville case.

Creedon told the Clovis board that his disapproval of their proposal did not prejudice their right to make a further recommendation for higher rents. But next time, he implied, it should be backed by evidence. One way—"the easiest and most desirable"—to obtain the facts would be by means of a public hearing, he said.

There had been no hearings, however, preceding the recommendations made by the Louisville advisory board. Creedon said the recommendations were appropriately supported.

Basis of Decontrol

Yesterday Creedon laid down what he considered the evidence should cover in order to substantiate a finding for decontrol:

1. The number of current vacancies in rental units in the area.
2. The number of families seeking rental units in the area as indicated by advertisements, listing, oral testimony at hearings, or otherwise.
3. Any changes which would affect the demand for, and supply of, rental housing in the immediate future, such as migration of tenants caused by changes in employment or other causes, and new housing units put on the market.
4. The estimated extent of change in rent levels which would result from decontrol.

Creedon also announced yesterday that he had approved the recommendations of eight local rent advisory boards to continue rent controls. Th eareas involved were: Saginaw-Bay City, Mich.; Alliance, Nebr.; Moultrie, Ga.; Morgantown and Martinsburg, W. Va.; Mount Vernon and Princeton, Ind.; and Madisonville, Ky.

Wilhelmina Rests

Juliana Gets Royal Power For 7 Weeks

PRINCESS JULIANA
Will rule as regent

The Hague, Netherlands, Oct. 14 (AP).—Crown Princess Juliana took over the royal power from her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, today after being sworn as regent until December 1.

The Queen, 67, plans to take a complete rest in hte seven weeks of the regency. At the end of that period the Queen may hand over her power again in case her health makes it necessary.

The crown princess will not move to the Hague, residence of the Queen, but will stay at her palace in Soestdijk near Amsterdam.

The United Press said the princess took the oath before Parliament in ancient Knight's Hall, amid shouts of "long live the regent!" which quickly spread to thousands of loyal Dutch subjects lining the streets outside. Juliana was accompanied by her husband, Prince Bernhard, who wore the uniform of a general in the Dutch army. Queen Wilhelmina was unable to attend.

Juliana read the oath slowly, in a clear voice. The audience began to cheer her as she read the last word.

After the ceremony, Juliana and Bernhard rode to the royal summer palace in The Hague Wood in a short motorcade, escorted by Hussars. The route was lined by cheering thousands, many of whom had been waiting for hours in the raw, grayish weather of a bleak autumn day.)

Drought Curbs Water Use at Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 14 (Spl.).—Mayor Paul B. Martin has restricted the use here of city water for washing automobiles and the use of hoses for any purpose.

The water supply, including the level in the emergency quarry reservoir at the edge of the city, is the lowest in some years, Robert Engle, superintendent of water, declared today.

Residents of the town have been urged to use water for all purposes as sparingly as possible.

The water in the reservoir reaches only 10 feet, according to Engle. Pumping is possible only to the 6-foot level. At the present rate of consumption of 10 inches a day, the city will have to stop pumping in another week unless rain falls, he said.

West Va. Bankers Meet at Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 14 (Spl.).—More than 100 members of the West Virginia Bankers Association (District 7) gathered here for their annual fall meeting, were told to "make definite efforts to improve their public relations" as a means of banking progress by Louis W. Bishop, vice president of the Philadelphia National Bank.

Bishop, principal speaker, declared "the day when banks tried to keep their activities and programs under cover has passed."

Bankers from Betrkeley, Jefferson, Morgan, Hampshire, Hardy, Mineral, Grant and Pendleton Counties were represented at the meeting.

Pleasant Portion of Pink Petticoat Shocks Ad Club in Battle of Sexes Over Hemlines

A lovely lady in a shocoking pink petticoat sounded another note yesterday in a battle of the sexes over skirt lengths.

The lady was Mrs. Betty Meakin, secretary of the Advertising Club of Washington. She walked into the club's luncheon at the Statler Hotel after members had heard a sizzling debate on the issue of new female fashions between four Washington newspaper fashion editors and four Washington newspapermen.

Mrs. Meakin wore a full and long skirted two-pice black broadcloth suit, topped off with a black satin beret, and for a final touch she lifted the hemline of her skirt high enough to show a pleasant fraction of the pink peticoat, edged with black lace.

With her appeared Mrs. Jean Ambrose, president of the Women's Advertising Club, wearing one of her own dresses resurrected from the days of 1927. It was a knee length, straight-sided black evening gown styled for the days of the limber legged Charleston.

The Washington Post
With her skirt where it was in the "Roaring Twenties," Mrs. Jean Ambrose, president of the Women's Advertising Club, strolls before guests at yesterday's Ad Club luncheon in the Hotel Statler

In the lineup of fashion debaters were Mrs. Lee Walsh, women's page editor of the Washington Daily News, Miss Inga Rundvold, fashion editor of the Times Herald; Miss Peggy Preston, fashion editor of The Washington Post, and Miss Eleni Sakes, fashion editor of the Evening Star.

The women defended the low skirts and the new look.

Opposing them were Bill Coyle, radio director for the Star; Jim Lucas of Scripps Howard; George Dixon, columnist for King Features, and Charles Yarbrough, reporter for The Washington Post, who was listed with the opposition, but adopted an unprejudiced line of argument.

Mrs. Walsh indicated slight engued, faithfully, that candy on thusiasm for her side. She arthe shelf is much more intriguing than in the stomach.

Yarbrough said "it seems to me the longer women wear skirts the better." He said long skirts "simply take material off the top, and put it on the bottom."

Miss Rundvold declared the style revolution is on—"it has been too carefully planned to be stopped by a few individual protests. Women look far better in fashion than they do out of it."

Coyle voiced a strong protest against the "folly of the new look." He said the old look was by far the more attractive. He added that with three daughters of his own, he felt it was his duty to his fellow fathers to oppose the new styles.

Miss Preston said "the new skirts sort of swish around her ankles and she becomes aware she's a very feminine, fragile, dainty little piece. She slips into a corselet and presto she can't breathe. She can't storm around an office or nag a husband if she can't breathe."

Lucas said he was glad to hear how it makes a woman feel to have things swishing around her ankles, and suggested the men get feather dusters and tickle their ankles for them. As for the lowered hem lines, said Lucas, "I'm ag'in 'em."

Miss Sakes said she was against ankle-length skirts for day wear, and against exaggerated stuffings and minimizers, but she favored "something new." She said fashions should be fun and not a fight.

Dixon got the most laughs, but seemingly censored parts of his own speech—this paragraph takes care of the rest.

$19,087 Bid Low On Seven-Room School Project

A low bid of $196,087 for construction of a seven-room unit at Kensington Elementary School was accepted yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education.

The contract was awarded to the construction firm of L. J. Keller & Sons, Jefferson, Md. The board ordered that construction should "proceed as rapidly as possible."

In other action the board authorized purchase of 17 school buses for future delivery and accepted the resignation of Mrs. Loura L. McCune as supervisor of nursery schools.

13 Fishermen, Missing 3 Months, Are Found

Pimentel, Peru, Oct. 14 (U.P.)—13 Chilean lobster fisherman were found today aboard their schooner Libertad near death from starvation and exposure after being missing for three months.

Brazil Minister Confirms Protest Sent to Moscow

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, Oct. 14 (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Dr. Raul Fernandes said today that continuation of diplomatic relations between Brazil and Russia depended on the Kremlin's reply to this country's protest against insults to President Eurico Gaspar Dutra in the Russian press.

Confirming that a diplomatic protest had been sent to Moscow, Dr. Fernandes said that while a breach was not contemplated here immediately, "the question may arise from the terms of the Soviet reply."

Gas Company, 2 Others Sued For $180,000

The Washington Gas Light Co. and two other defendants yesterday were named in a suit asking $180,000 damages as a result of a gas stove explosion.

Filed in District Court by Nina Louise Sullivan and her husband, Michael Sullivan, 104 Emerson st. nw., the action charges the gas company's conversion to natural gas caused the blast.

Named in addition to the gas company were Conversions and Surveys, Inc., 2610 Virginia ave. nw., and Mrs. Rose B. Anderson, 4900 16th st. nw., owner of the apartment at 3204 18th st. nw., where the Sullivans lived at the time. Conversions and Surveys, Inc., is the contracting firm in charge of the conversion from manufactured to natural gas.

Mrs. Sullivan, charging she suffered severe burns, internal internal injuries and injuries to her nervous system, asks $50,000 each from the three defendants. Her husband seeks $10,000 each from the defendants.

The explosion, the Sullivans say, occurred May 15.

The gas company had no comment on the suit. Its conversion to natural gas will be completed in about a week.

Survey Urged To Determine County Needs

A survey to determine needs for future community facilities in Montgomery County was proposed yesterday at a meeting of Montgomery County commissioners.

The proposal was made by Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter who said the survey is necessitated primarily by continued expansion of Federal agencies in the county.

Sauter and Commissioner Oliver W. Youngblood were named to a committee to suggest local officials who might be appointed to make the survey.

The survey, Sauter suggested, should take in roads, schools, police, street lighting, storm drainage control and other such facilities.

Food Program 'Hits Stride'

houses complying with President Truman's food conservation program. These will be distributed by the American Red Cross through school-children members of the Red Cross Junior Aids, and by other national organizations.

Tuesday Ruling Modified

3. That the committee has modified its meatless-day (Tuesday) rule, to permit the use of meat by-products. The by-products now permissible to eat on Tuesday and still comply with rules, include liver, kidneys, brains, sweetbreads, hearts, pigs feet and pigs knuckles, tripe, oxtail and tongue.

4. That the committee's appeal to housewives to curtail the use, or waste, of food products, was meant also to include hostesses to cut down similarly at "cocktail parties," teas, etc.

5. That the response to the committee's appeal to mayors of the country's important cities to join in the campaign is satisfactory.

6. That the brewing industry must make some "reasonably substantial reduction in their grain consumption" and not merely substitute one grain for another in making beer.

Luckman declared that the food conservation program still provides that major meats such as beef, veal, lamb and pork should not be eaten Tuesdays, and that chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks and eggs should be removed from the Thursday diet.

No Estimate of Results

Luckman declared that the program will continue for the "next several months" until the goal set for the committee by President Truman to save 100 million bushels of grain has been achieved. He hesitated to estimate what savings may be accomplished by measures already in effect.

He also declined to state which of the three conservation campaigns, by farmers, by industries or by consumers, is considered most important, declaring they are dependent upon each other for the whole program to succeed.

He ruled out, at least for the immediate future, any change in the present conservation days, such as a proposal to put poultry back on the Thursday menus.

Two schools of thought, he added, have been expressed on that subject. One held that cutting down consumption of fowl will leave more poultry on farms to consume grains, while the other held that such reduction would discourage farmers from producing more poultry and thus save grain.

Luckman said that some definite commitment is expected soon from the brewers, but indicated the committee is insisting upon reducing beer and ale production.

Luckman said that other industries will be asked to join in the program, lisiting the wet milling industry, or makers of molasses, syrups, etc; the dry millers, including flour millers and cereal manufacturers, and the makers of commercial livestock feeds.

Rep. Judd Tells Of Underfed He Saw Abroad

Representative Walter H. Judd (R. Minn.) yesterday added the testimony of a physician to reports of suffering from lack of food in Europe.

"I saw undernourished people in Germany and Northern Greece," said the former medical missionary. "In Berlin you don't have to look two blocks from the station. A doctor can tell when people are underfed. Their bones don't have to be sticking out."

Judd, just back from a tour of Europe with the Mundt-Smith committee, will leave for China later this week. He thinks the President should call Congress in special session on its own responsibility.

Wheat Belt Dry Spell Sends Price to New High

Lack of moisture in the Southwestern winter wheat belt was a stronger influence on the grain markets yesterday than the announcement that distillers would shut down for 60 days.

December wheat reached a new seasonal high at $2.96¼. Cash No. 2 red wheat reached $3.02—the highest since 1920. Corn and oats both were higher, reflecting the boost in wheat.

Wholesale meat prices were down slightly in New York; and top-grade butter dropped 3½ cents a pound wholesale in New York.

Luckman's Committee Uses Gen. Pershing's Old Library

Yesterday's news conference with Charles Luckman, head of President Truman's Citizens Food Committee, was in the library of General of the Armies John J. Pershing's private suite at the old State Department Building.

The offices, reserved for the general since his retirement as Chief of Staff of the Army in 1924, are just as he left them.

Reporters found the library as interesting as the conference. The furniture is old-fashioned but plush. From the walls look down paintings of former greats of the Army—General Winfield Scott, General Philip Sheridan, and a score of others.

A quick examination of one shelf of the several thousand books surrounding the room indicated the general had a wide choice of reading. On the shelf with Plutarch's Lives were "The Waitress' Dilemma", circa 1906, two Bibles, a copy of "From Private to Field Marshal", "The Makings of a State" and a similar wide assortment.

They gave no signs of recent reading.

Sharp Increase Seen for Winter

Potatoes will increase sharply in price this winter, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted last night.

There appears to be "a close balance between potato supplies and demand in the months ahead," BAE reported, in contrast to the great shortages last year. The late potato crop, if reported, is about 71 million bushels smaller than last year.

So far this year the Government has bought 15 million bushels under the price support law.

Restaurants Serve Meat, Blame Public

The "meatless Tuesday" edict was ignored by some downtown restaurants yesterday but they placed the blame on the general public.

Sixteen of 20 restaurants located within a five-block radius of the old State Department Building, where the Citizens Food Committee has headquarters, were serving meat and some offered a broad variety of dishes from which to choose.

Several restauranteurs said their patrons insisted on meat dishes and others declared that if they did not continue serving their customers would transfer their patronage to eating places which did.

One manager said several patrons entered the restaurant, asked if there was meat on the menu and when they found there was, declared, "Well, then we'll stay."

The four who were carrying out the meatless directive were the S & W cafeteria on G st., one of the town's largest; Child's restaurants, Bassin's and Olmsted's. All four featured poultry on their menus.

Child's Restaurant on Pennsylvania ave. nw. reported few complaints as they compiled for the first time. For a brief interval, it was rumored that the restaurant was not planning to comply. This was the result of a sign placed in the window announcing, "Child's Does It Right—Baked Ham." An official hastily removed the sign, which had been placed there in error.

At Olmsted's, a similar error occurred when a sign advertising a minute steak was posted on the front door of the G st. establishment.

Max Bassin, manager of Bassin's, said several firms were giving second thoughts to continued compliance. He declared that customers were entering restaurants a few hundred feet away where meat dishes were being featured.

Some restaurants said they were experimenting with public response before planning complete and continued compliance with the meatless Tuesday program. Fan and Bill's dropped steak plates, their specialty, from menus, but continued serving hamburger.

An official of the Nedick's chain, which has three units here, said hamburgers were dropped from the menus but frankfurters and ham sandwiches would be continued on Tuesdays.

A steak restaurant outside of the downtown area reported business as "about usual," with no noticeable drop because of the Tuesday plan. Most patrons ordered steak, it was reported. An official said the food saving "is up to the individual."

The Washington Restaurant Association, which promised all-out cooperation with the conservation program Monday night, said many restaurants "were hard put to place meatless Tuesday into effect by today."

The association also placed responsibility for cooperation in the drive on the public, pointing out that "immediate and ultimate compliance is dependent upon the demands and acceptance of the public to whom the restaurants are committed as public service institutions."

Cafeterias in Federal buildings continued meatless Tuesday observance and reported most patrons were "cooperating splendidly."

The District Commissioners met yesterday, but did not take further action on the appointment of a local citizens' food committee. In Virginia, Gov. William Tuck telegraphed President Truman his "wholehearted support" in the food-saving drive.

The 32 members of the Hotel Association of Washington, which had unanimously supported the meatless Tuesday plan earlier, continued compliance yesterday.

Smithsonian Expert Tells Of Indians

The early Puritans and the Indians had near-perfect relations on the Island of Marthas Vineyard near Cape Cod, Mass., a scientist of the Smithsonian Institution reported yesterday.

Dr. Henry B. Collins, ethnologist, said the Indians became such staunch friends of Thomas Mayhew and his followers that they were armed to fight on the side of the colonists during the French and Indian Wars.

Some of the remaining families, which during the Puritan settlement numbered 3000 members of the Wampanoag tribe of the general Algonquian stock, today represent a relatively pure stock, he reported.

Correction

In a news story published yesterday about the strike at the Excelsior Pearl Works, Inc., plant in Ridgely, Md., a statement was attributed to James Lynch, who was described as an organizer for the International Ladies Garment Workers, AFL. The statement actually was made by Irwin J. Jaffe, assistant regional director of the union.

Lynch is not a union official, but is an official of the Ridgely Chamber of Commerce.

U. S. Proposal Is Opposed

ers who are under 14 years of age.

"This is a dictatorship, in violation of democracy and the United Nations charter."

He said it was "perfectly clear "that the American Government wants it to have the broadest functions despite its "pious denials."

Dr. Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, vehement antagonist of the five-power veto, declared Vishinsky was just "substituting assertion and vituperation for arguments."

The problem facing the Assembly, he said was "not whether there is a lot of business on the agenda which he cannot dispose of." The real problem of the United Nations, he said, "is whether action in the Security Council has broken down and whether anything can be done to correct it."

He agreed that the charter gave the Council primary responsibility for peace and security. But the charter required "prompt" handling, and if the veto continues to be exercised and nothing is done, the Assembly should act.

Evatt said he favored the American proposal but he was concerned lest the Assembly be swamped with unimportant matters as a result. He therefore suggested that the proposal be given to a sub-committee for investigation of all facts.

If it were decided to set up the committee as a means of meeting a deadlock in the Security Council, Dr. Evatt declared, "perhaps the deadlocks would become fewer and fewer."

As for the committee being in violation of the Charter, he read Article 11 which states that the Assembly has responsibilities parallel and concurrent with the Security Council. That power is limited only by a prohibition against the Assembly considering an item which is on the agenda of the Security Council, and, of course, the Assembly has no power to enforce its decisions.

Dr. Adolfo Costa du Rels of Bolivia agreed with the necessity for the committee. The Security Council has become a "political fiasco" because "of the sterile principles of the veto," he said.

Dr. Arturo deSpradel of the Dominican Republic said creation of the committee was an "evident necessity."

Orville Wright Is 'Very Much Improved'

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 14 (AP).—Aviation pioneer Orville Wright is back in his Oakwood home tonight, "very much improved" after four days in Miami Valley Hospital.

Senators Probe Steel Shipments For Arabian Oil

The Senate Small Business committee last night scheduled public hearings on shipments of steel for construction of the Trans-Arabian oil pipe line.

Chairman Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) said he had "accepted" the statement of National Defense Secretary James Forrestal that the project is "in the national interest," but added:

"However, the committee will not slacken its investigation of oil and steel shortages and distribution, and will seek in every way possible to become fully informed on the situation.

Russell Brown, general counsel of the Independent Petroleum Association, and Walter A. Hallanan, president of the National Petroleum Council, head today's list of witnesses.

Marshall Plan Attack Beaten

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.,
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 14.—An indirect attack upon the Marshall Plan by the Soviet bloc was defeated by the Assembly's economic committee today by 32 to 6, with seven abstentions.

It came in the form of a Polish resolution calling upon member nations "not to establish machinery outside the U. N. in settling international economic problems."

Oscar Lange, of Poland insisted this did not imply "retroactive criticism," but his resolution was generally interpreted as an attempt to block any resumption of the 16-nation conference that met in Paris recently to draw a program under the Marshall Plan.

The Soviet delegate, A. A. Ariutunian of the Soviet Foreign Office, repeated his recent charges that the United States had bypassed the United Nations in helping war-devastated countries. Leo Mattes of Yugoslavia argued that it was mandatory under the charter to settle all fundamental economic problems through the United Nations.

But France and the United Kingdom insisted the charter contained no such obligation, and reminded the Soviet group the recent 16-nation meetings at Paris had been open to all European countries.

The Poles also lost, by 32 to 6 with 11 abstentions, a proposal that member nations should "make use of the machinery of the United Nations in settling international economic problems."

Crippling Walkouts Spread; Ramadier Accuses Leftists

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP).—France took energetic measures today to break what Premier Paul Ramadier called a "political" strike of Paris' Communist-led subway and bus workers which began spreading tonight to other industries.

While millions of Parisians struggled some from work after having walked, hitch-hiked and bicycled to their offices this morning, the government requisitioned 300 private buses to operate a "minimum" transport service.

The government also sent out a call to the nation for volunteer drivers to operate buses, trucks and private cars, promising free transportation to Paris and 600 francs (about $5) a day to the volunteers. It sent a fleet of 1500 army trucks to transport passengers and posted placards about the city urging strikers to return to work.

But the walkout began to spread when workers of two sections of the Renault auto factory voted to lay down their tools. In the Lyons region, the building workers union also voted to strike.

French merchant seamen announced they would strike Thursday if wage increases were not granted.

Ramadier declared the transport walkout called "suddenly five days before the municipal elections shapes up as a political maneuver."

"If the government yielded to such maneuvers it would strike a fatal blow at the regime," he declared, promising that "we will show that our regime is capable of guaranteeing it against all aggression."

Communists, De Gaulle To Meet in Elections

Paris, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Union of the French People (RPF) and the Communist Party will clash for the first time in an electoral battle next Sunday when millions in 36,000 communes vote for local governments.

The results may well determine the future central government. The government of Premier Ramadier is likely to fall if either De Gaulle's party or the Communists win a decisive victory.

Both are avowed exponents of "strong" government—De Gaulle of the right and the Communists far left. RPF candidates have charged the Communists are an "alien" party. The Communists accuse De Gaulle of trying to set up a rightist dictatorship.

The young Popular Republican Party (MRP) of Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, which held the Communists at a virtual standstill in last year's elections, fears the De Gaullist movement will cut into its ranks.

The MRP will take a strong pro-American and pro-Marshall Plan stand in an attempt to hold its own against the anti-American Communists and the extremely nationalist De Gaullists.

Arab Groups Still Fighting Partition Plan

Lake Success, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Arab countries, in the face of almost certain defeat on Palestine, began their last-round battle today against the United States for indorsing the proposed partition of the Holy Land. The opening Arab attack touched only lightly on Russia, which also supports partition.

Dr. Farid Zein Ed-Din, Syrian minister to Moscow, opened the new and seemingly hopeless fight, with a 75-minute speech, most of which was directed against the United States and Zionists.

The Arab fight was expected to be carried on tomorrow by Camille Chamoun, Lebanese delegate, in another speech.

While blaming the United States for aggravating the Palestine situation, Zein Ed-Din avoided any criticism of Russia. His only mention of the Soviet stand was a brief reference to Russia's "wishful thinking."

Zein Ed-Din told the 57-Nation Palestine Committee of the United Nations Assembly that "Zionism has formed a bridgehead in Palestine which is being constantly fed by money from abroad."

Most of this money, he added, came from America.

He said there were six times more Jews in New York State than in Palestine, and asked whether the United States would agree to the partition of New York into a separate Jewish state.

Britain Warns Arabs To Keep Clear of Border

London, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Great Britain was reported today to have warned Arab states that a move to carry out the Arab league decision to mass troops along the Palestine border may have drastic consequences.

The foreign office revealed that British representatives "informally" told the Syrian government that Britain sharply disapproves Syrian troop "maneuvers" in the direction of the Palestine frontier. There were strong indications here that similar "advice" had been handed to other Arab states.

Dripping Poplar In Bone Dry Area Offers Poser

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—It has been raining for a week now under Mrs. H. D. Elya's poplar tree, although it has been bone dry everywhere else in Baltimore, and George N. Brancato, the weatherman, went out today to check up.

Brancato came to three off-hand conclusions:

1. Something is falling to the ground under the tree, and it is wet.
2. It looks like water, feels like water and tastes like water.
3. It is not falling from the heavens.

Mrs. Elya's poplar tree is the only one in the block which has shed almost all its leaves, and Brancato thought this might be a clew.

Some neighbors figure the tree is weeping for its lost glory. Others say its a miracle and Mrs. Elya's poplar tree may become a shrine.

Brancato said he had seen trees in Hawaii condense moisture from the humid air and drip it to the ground, but never in the continental United States.

Tax Service Schedule Studied in Maryland

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—The State's Board of Revenue Estimates today took the first step in setting up a schedule of tax sources so some can be earmarked for exclusive use of the State, others for its local subdivisions.

James J. Lacy, State comptroller, reported to the group that Governor Lane had asked the study in connection with the granting of special taxing powers to the City of Baltimore at a special session of the General Assembly planned for sometime in the next three or four weeks.

The board decided to consult Dr. V. O. Key, jr., of Johns Hopkins University and Dr. William Paul Walker of the University of Maryland, specialists in State financing.

5th Column Feared

Iran Sends Thousands To South

Tabriz, Iran, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The jittery Iranian government, fearful of a Soviet-inspired revolt in oil rich Azerbaijan, has removed thousands of suspected Communists to southern Iran to prevent formation of a fifth column, police disclosed today.

Four thousand have been transferred to the south in batches of from 50 to 100 since the Red hunt began in September. As many more may be transferred in the next six weeks.

Despite insistence that the shifts are a necessary security measure, there is increasing bitterness among Azerbaijanians. Some claim several suspected Communist sympathizers are still free because they have bribed officials to give them a clean bill of health. Others complain that Azerbaijanians are being railroaded on false charges made by political enemies.

Harriman Hits Red Drive of Hate, Fear

Commerce Secretary Terms Vishinsky Attack 'Absurdity'

Chicago, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman charge dtoday that Russian leaders through their controlled press are restoring to a deliberate hate-and-fear campaign to further the Communist goal of engulfing the world.

Branding as an "absurdity" the recent attack on the American press by Soviet Vice Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, Harriman said "the Soviet press—as an instrument of public policy—has systematially been arousing hatreds and fear for the past two years."

In an address before the Inland Daily Press Association, Harriman declared that current Russian policies are motivated by Nikolai Lenin's statement that "as soon as we are strong enough to defeat capitalism as a whole we shall immediately take it by the scruff of the neck."

"This conviction is basic to their philosophy," said Harriman who served as United States Asbassador to Moscow during the last two years of World War II.

"Their tactic is to take the initiative by making numerous and violent charges, however little they can be backed up with evidence, in order to put the targets of their attack on the defensive," he said.

Harriman said the recent Warsaw manifesto, proclaiming the revival of the Comintern, was in accord with the latest shift in Communist Party strategy—"to pull out the last stop in criticizing us."

"The formation of this new Communist organization at this moment," he said, "is probably the outgrowth of a fear that their aggressive program for taking over Europe will be fortstalled by plans for European reconstruction based on the Marshall proposals."

Soviet attacks on the Marshall plan, he said, are "proof of . . . their flagrant disregard for the needs of the people in Western Europe."

"If we are to achieve our aspirations for peace, decent living standards and freedom," said Harriman, "we must take into account that there is a force intent on the creation of disorder in the world and, secondly, that we must take positive action wherever necessary in all the four fields where the pressure is being applied."

Harriman outlined the four fields as follows:

Economic—"We must continue ourt efforts to promote world economic recovery as an essential to the stability of free governments."

Political—"We must adhere steadfastly to the priciples laid down in the United Nations Charter and give full support to the U. N.

Military—"A powerful American air force particularly will be the strongest deterrent to the ambitions of aggressors anywhere, and will contribute to our determined efforts for the preservation of peace."

Propaganda—"It is absolutely essential that our present understaffed and underfinanced overseas information program be strengthened and developed."

Noting that the recent Russian offer of wheat for France was accompanied by great fanfare and Communist activity, Harriman said: "France, it appears, can entertain the hope of eating some Russian food only at election time."

Lefts Lose Council Rule In Rome Vote

Rome, Oct. 14 (AP).—Parties of the right and center apparently won 45 seats in Rome's 80-member city council on the basis of complete returns today from Sunday's election, but there was no assurance they would join in a common front against the leftists.

It seemed likely the council, like the one chosen last November, would deadlock over the choice of a mayor. November's failure to agree made Sunday's election necessary.

Premier Alcide de Gasperi's Christian Democrats and the People's Bloc made up of Communists, Socialists and two minor leftist parties each won 27 probable seats. Other leftist parties could count on eight seats, but it was not certain the extreme left would get all their support.

The Christian Democrats doubled their vote over the balloting in November, when they ran a poor third. The Vatican-supported party of de Gasperi apparently picked up thousands of votes from reactionary splinter parties.

Driver Seeks Appeal After One Acquittal

A double jeopardy plea was filed yesterday on behalf of John E. Robb, 29, 1263 Evarts st. ne., whose acquittal on manslaughter charges by a Prince Georges County trial magistrate was appealed to Circuit Court by Assistant State's Attorney Hervey Machen.

Robb was acquitted May 2 by Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens in Upper Marlboro Police Court on the manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Lewis S. Carter, a passenger in his car when it overturned March 13. The magistrate fined Robb, however, a total of $200 on charges of reckless driving by colliding and failing to keep to the right of the road.

ABC Board Refuses to Dismiss Charge of Serving Beer to Baby

The Washington Post
Two-year-old Patricia Ann Boudoulas likes water, too!

The ABC Board yesterday refused to dismiss a charge of "sale or delivery" of beer to a 27-month-old girl and took the charges under advisement.

The Board has had under advisement for a week a motion to dismiss the charge against a Washington restauranteur on grounds that a baby could not engage in a "commercial transaction."

(Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West last month issued a storm-provoking opinion that minors can legally drink in the District providing they didn't order the drinks, pay for them or have the waiter set the drinks in front of them. He said it is legal for the adults to order drinks and give them to the minors).

Defendants in the action are Michael J. Kelly, owner of Kelly's Restaurant, 1801 L st. nw., and his wife, Annie. Mrs. Kelly has been charged with serving a shot glass full of beer to the 27-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Boudoulos, now of 1334 Colonial rd. nw.

Neither of the parents attended the first hearing October 6, but both testified yesterday.

Mrs. Boudoulos told the board she and her husband were served one beer each in the Kelly restaurant and that a small whisky glass with foam in it was put before the baby as a plaything.

She said the baby began crying and Mrs. Kelly brought a whisky glass with Coca-Cola in it. Police Pvt. Howard Dudley, of the 3d Precinct, tol dthe board in the first hearing he saw Mrs. Kelly serve the two beers to the parents and a shot glass full to the child.

Air Force Chiefs 'Fumbling' War Planning, Says Ex-Aide

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The former chief of the Air Force Materiel Command's industrial preparedness staff charged yesterday that Air Force chiefs are "fumbling" industrial war planning and giving the Nation "make believe national defense."

"Officer cliques intent on empire building" at Wright Field, Ohio, materiel command headquarters, have rejected competent civilian advice on industrial mobilization, former Maj. H. H. Rosenheim told the President's Air Policy Commission.

"Continued weakness in the Air Force's industrial planning program invites a future Pearl Harbor on a national scale," he said.

Rosenheim told the commission he left the AAF in August after five years of industrial planning work in order to be free to "bring the nature of the uroblem and the seriousness of the deficienciess' to Air Force Secretary Symington and the investigating commission.

Procurement heads of the military air services, though "amateurs" in industrial planning, "have refused to establish industrial advisory committees and regular participation in the planning patterns by industrial management leaders and other qualified personnel from industry," Rosenheim said.

Instead, he continued, they "pay lip-service" to industrial planning and ar e"duplicating the pre-war errors." He hit particularly at what he described as the Air Force's limitation of air industrial preparedness to "stabilizing the peacetime aircraft industry."

There is almost a total lock of planning for wartime mass production of air weapons by outside industry, Rosenheim said.

"The primary purpose of the air services' annual procurement program should be to maintain and prepare the aircraft industry for rapid production expansion in the event of a national emergency," he said. Only five million dollars were allowed for industrial preparedness this year, he added.

Rosenheim urged that a top level civilian should be placed in charge of such work directly under Symington and that Congressional committees review carefully procurement spending and policies.

J. Carlton Ward, president of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp., told the Finletter Commission that long-range planning and careful attention to industrial preparedness were essential to an adequate American air power.

He urged greater advancement for Air Force officers concerned with industrial preparedness, and declared they should have equal opportunity for key positions and high rank with line officers.

Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, retired, president of the Aircraft Industries Association, and Robert E. Gross, president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., urged that Congress establish a five-year program for aircraft procurement of the military services.

Echols declared there should be mandatory replacement of service plane strength at the rate of 25 percent per year to keep our air forces modern.

"We are operating," said Gross, "usder a short range, hit or miss, feast or famine policy that is uncertain, costly and inefficient, and under which the aircraft industry cannot hope to remain strong and be able to perform its basic function in our national security program."

Nursery School Paid Night Visit By Commissioners

A "surprise" visit to the Hite Nursery School, near Rockville, Md., was made last night by the five Montgomery County Commissioners.

The board, according to President Brooke Johns, decided to see for itself whether the school's owner, Mrs. Maude C. Hite, should be issued a permit to run the nursery.

Several parents of children formerly in the school complained to officials their children received inadequate care and police who recentely inspected th eschool on the Rockville pike said Mrs. Hite was operating without required State and county permits.

Mrs. Hite declined to permit an inspection last night on the grounds the children were alseep and Johns said th eboard would visit the school at a later date. The visit was made about 7 p. m.

Reds Could Launch Offensive In Any Direction, Army Says

The Army yesterday told its troops throughout the world that Russia, because of her dominant position in the Eurasian continent, is in position to launch an offensive war "in almost any direction."

An official pamphlet, outlining Soviet strengths and weaknesses as a basis for discussion of current world problems, declared Red leaders "could prepare an attack . . . toward Europe, China, or by air across the Polar regions."

The pamphlet, entitled "Geopolitics of the Soviet Union" and prepared by the Department of Army special staff, was distributed to Army, Navy and Air Force units everywhere. Designated "Armed Forces Talk No. 197," it is prepared "for use of commanders in informing their troops."

Refers to "Disagreements"

A foreword declares that "present disagreements between the United States and the Soviet Union may properly come up in such discussion."

Pointing to the great size and position of Russia, the document called attention to the doctrine of a geopolitician named Mackinder who taught that the nation which dominated Europe-Asia land mass could control the world.

"More recent geopolitical theory," it added, deals with two such "Heartlands," Eurasia and North America.

While noting the advantages of Russia's position in an offensive war, the Army pamphlet declared that she has certain disadvantages from a defensive point of view.

Cites Defense Problems

"To defend their borders," it was stated, "teh Soviets must provide forces at widely scattered points, thus weakening their defensive strength at any one point. The Soviets likewise have few warm-water ports for year-round access to the seat."

Factors which contribute to Russia's strength, declared the army, are:

Her great size—8½ million square miles or some one-sixth of the world's land surface—and 200 million population. Despite the war, Russia's population is growing while that of other nations is shrinking or stabilized.

Presence of most raw materials within Russian borders.

Its leadership of international communism and energetic foreign policy. "Communists everywhere conduct their local affairs in conformance with their basic loyalty to the Soviet Union as the home of communism."

Unfavorable Factors

Factors which are unfavorable to future Soviet development listed by the Army are:

Lack of individual initiative, mechanical aptitude and a system of competitive enterprise, partially offset by a determination to industrialize.

Lack of natural rubber and large oil deposits without industrial facilities to take advantage of them.

Another big question mark is how much uranium and thorium —materials for atomic energy— Russia has.

Seven other delegations are scheduled to see the Governor tomorrow.

Today's delegations came in behalf of Judge Walter T. McCarthy of Arlington; Judge Kennon C. Whittle, of Martinsville; Judge Floridus S. Crosby of Staunton and Samuel H. Williams, Lynchburg attorney. Each presented the Governor numerous resolutions, letters, statements and other documents commending their candidates.

Among the Arlington delegation, of 22 versons were State Senator W. D. Medley, Delegate-nominee Robert J. McClandish and Delegate George Damm.

In supporting Judge McCarthy for the Supreme Court seat, Senator Medley described him as a man eminently suited for the position and pointed out that the northern Virginia area is not now represented on the high court bench.

Slayer Gets Second Stay Of Execution

A 22-year-old convicted murderer yesterday was granted a second stay of execution just 24 hours before he was scheduled to die in the electric chair.

The slayer, Albert Hawkins, who had killed a Safeway Store clerk, John Hall Knight, during a holdup April 13, 1946, and who was to pay the supreme penalty today, was given a delay until October 31 by Associate Justice Alexander Holtzoff in District Court.

The step was taken upon recommendation of Government counsel to give Robert L. Miller, attorney for Hawkins, opportunity to appeal to President Truman for commutation.

Hawkins and an accomplice in the holdup-slaying, Laurence I. Prout, were sentenced on July 26, 1946, to die October 18, 1946.

A stay was later granted them both pending appeal to the President.

Truman commuted Prout's sentence, but rejected the plea made in behalf of Hawkins, who did the actual shooting.

Miller said he would base his appeal to the President on the grounds that, according to District law, both the defendants were principals in the same act, and, therefore, should be given equal consideration under the law.

Gallatin Statue to Be Unveiled

The Washington Post
Workmen place the Gallatin statue on its pedestal last night

A statue of Albert Gallatin, secretary of the Treasury under President Jefferson, will be unveiled at 4 p. m. today at the north end of the Treasury Building.

Gallatin was one of two natives of Europe, famous for their important roles in American public life, who will be honored this month with new memorials in Washington.

The other is the late Oscar B. Straus, former secretary of Commerce and Labor, then one department, and one-time ambassador to Turkey.

Gallatin was a native of Switzerland, and Strauss was born in Germany.

President Truman will speak extemporaneously at ceremonies October 26 to accept the Straus memorial fountain in the 14th street plaza between the District and Labor Department Buildings and across the street from the Commerce Department Building.

Gallatin's statue will be unveiled by his great-granddaughter, Mrs. Louise Gallatin Gay, of Edgartown, Mass., Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder will formally receive the statue from Allan Sproul, chairman of the Albert Gallatin Memorial Committee.

James E. Fraser, the sculptor of the statue—and designer of the buffalo for the nickel—will be present. A. L. M. Wiggins, Undersecretary of the Treasury, will preside, and the prayers will be by the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

There will be a marine color guard, and music by the Navy Band.

Wage Rise Indorsed By Schwellenbach

Round One:

Legal Tilt Marks ITU Hearing

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—A ruling on the constitutionality of the Taft-Hartley labor relations act was passed over, but a long battle over other integral parts of the new law took shape today at the first NLRB hearing on charges that a union engaged in unfair practices.

With Chief Examiner William R. Ringer of Washington on the bench, National Labor Relations Board regional counsel formally opened the case against the International Typographical Union and its Baltimore local 12.

The unions are charged with failure to bargain collectively with the 22 printing firms organized as the Baltimore Graphic Arts League.

Counsel for ITU, after three vigorous but unsuccessful attempts to obtain a postponement, finally brought out a legal maneuver which could possibly have the same effect.

The union maneuvered the Government into a position of asking subpoenas for certain communications from the international unon to its local. This might take several days and was termed by Government counsel as "deliberate suppression of evidence to get a continuance."

Just before the Government presented its first evidence, Ringer said that while he would do so if the union insisted, he expected to withhold any ruling on two points of constitutionality, leaving them for the National Labor Relations Board itself, or the courts.

The ITU and Local 12, answering the complaint filed by the NLRB, argued the Taft-Hartley Act is unconstitutional because it violates the Fifth Amendment on taking of property without due process of law, and the Thirteenth Amendment by subjecting workers to "involuntary servitude."

Gerhard Van Arkel of Washington, counsel for ITU, raised no objections to Ringer's statement, but said the union was not waiving its rights to argue the issues before the NLRB or the courts.

Scarcely had the case been called when Van Arkel asked for postponement until November 3 to permit the presence of Woodruff Randolph, International ITU president, who is now attending the American Federation of Labor convention in San Francisco.

Vigorously, Van Arkel pursued the contention that Randolph was an "indispensable witness" and should be on hand to hear the Government's case.

Just as vigorously was the motion opposed by Sidney J. Barban, counsel for the Fifth Region of the NLRB, and Earle K. Shawe, counsel for the Graphic Arts League.

Their position was that Randolph's presence was not needed immediately, and that "there have been threats of strikes" and the league members "have great apprehension of the destruction of their entire businesses."

Since a recent contract expired, the union printers in the city have continued to work without a written contract. The ITU at its August convention in Cleveland laid down a policy against written contracts, directing members to continue at work on posted "conditions of employment."

Ringer admitted ITU minutes and by-laws as evidence over objections of Van Arkel, who resigned in protest as NLRB general counsel one hour after enactment of the Taft-Hartley law.

Van Arkel said the new law "excluded from evidence" such papers "in respect to the union's internal affairs." NLRB counsel contends these papers show how actions of the local are directed by the international.

Under the Taft-Hartley law, Van Arkel said, "unions are protected against such inquiries by any government agency."

75 Cents Per Hour Now Necessary, He Tells CIO Parley

Boston, Oct. 14 (AP).—The CIO national convention voted unanimously today to battle for outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, and to work for the political defeat of its supporters.

The convention left it to individual unions whether to comply with the law as it passed the resolution with a standing vote.

"We cannot and will not acquiesce in a law which makes it a crime to exercise the rights of freedom of speech, freedom of press and freedom of assembly," the resolution said.

CIO President Philip Murray declared, however, that "some organizations of the CIO may file and qualify with the new labor board, adding "there is nothing in the policy or procedures of this organization which prevents them from exercising that right."

Earlier the delegates representing six milion CIO members heard Labor Secretary L. B. Schwellenbach declare himself in favor of a 75-cent hourly minimum wage and assert that spiraling prices have consistently outrun wage increases.

Schwellenbach termed the 75-cent wage floor a "necessity because of changed living costs," and added:

"Price increases have consistently moved ahead of wage increases at a time when the profits of industry were increasing over 100 per cent."

Organizing Drive On

The Secretary's address came as the convention of the 41-union congress announced the greatest organizing campaign in its history and prepared a finish battle in a shipyard strike which one union leader called the "first beachhead of reactionary forces since the Taft-Hartley law."

Schwellenbach declared:

". . . we do not today have a free market in which there is competition. We have a sellers' market because the earnings and savings of the people during the war and the profits of the comporations make it possible without control to run the prices up."

From August, 1945, to August, 1947, he said a 21 per cent boost in wages was outstripped by a 24 per cent jump in prices. He estimated an increase in profits of "slightly above 100 per cent since the abolition of OPA."

Reuther Cheered

Heading support for the 17-weeks-old strike of shipyard workers against the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and United States Steel, President Walter P. Reuther of the United Automobile Workers was cheered for his declaration:

"Obstacles put in our way by political stooges in Washington are not going to stop us. . . .

"We'll see Senator Taft in hell before we see him in the White House."

Still awaiting action is a resolution calling for a foreign policy aimed at peace through demilitarization, and "full enjoyment of democracy and economic security and abundance for the peoples of the world."

A CIO spokesman said the foreign policy action would await the speech which has stirred top expectancy at this meeting—the Wednesday address of Secretary of State Marshall, his first before a labor convention.

Schwellenbach Urges Ouster of Communists

Boston, Oct. 14 (AP).—Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach said today the labor movement should take all its Communists by the seat of their pants and the nap of their neck and throw them out."

He gave his views in reply to questions by reporters after he addressed the CIO national convention.

Schwellenbach also repeated his proposal that Congress outlaw the Communist party as a political body.

Plane Passengers Identified

A former UNRRA worker in Washington whose sister lives in Clinton, Md., and a former secretary of the Canadian Embassy were identified as among the passengers of the Boeing flying boat forced down in the Atlantic yesterday.

One, Miss Johanna von Goechingk, 39, was in Washington as personnel utilization officer with UNRRA from September, 1944, until she was transferred to London in August, 1945. A native of New York, Miss Von Goechingk had recently resigned from the preliminary committee for International Refugee Organization and was on her way back to New York. She had originally been scheduled to fly to the United States a month ago, but these plans were canceled by the American Airlines strike.

Miss Mary Gandy of London was on her way to Washington for a five-month visit with her sister, Mrs. W. C. Schroeder, Clinton, Md. Miss Gandy was attached to the British Censorship Bureau in Trinidad in 1942 and 1944 and was with the Allied Military Government in Germany until last year.

The third, Albert E. Ritchie, served from August, 1944, to June, 1946, as second secretary of the Canadian Embassy. A native of New Brunswick, Ritchie is now with the United Nations, and was returning from the International Trade Organization meeting in Geneva. With him are his wife, Gwendoline, and son, Gordon, aged 3.

Lewis' Office Is Abolished By AFL Convention Vote

recessed for the night, Green had sought to conciliate the hard-hitting, opposing speakers.

Restating the issues, he called on delegates to "disagree as friends, not as enemies."

Lewis Faces Showdown

Lewis earlier declared his United Mine Workers "will not run with you" if the convention should choose to capitulate to the communism affidavit requirement of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Associates explained that Lewis meant only that he would not sign the affidavit—and not that he intended to bolt the AFL.

Lewis bolted the AFL in 1936 in the fight over formation of the CIO, but returned to the federation in January, 1946, after breaking off relatoins with his own "baby"—the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

He faces another showdown tomorrow or Thursday over his miscellaneous District 50 which has jurisdictional problems with several other AFL unions.

Dan Tobin, president of the teamsters, answered Lewis by asserting that the non-Communist affidavit constituted a question "not of much importance."

Tobin also drew cheers and laughter when he greeted the convention as "fellow belly-crawlers," in direct retort to Lewis' charges of "groveling."

"The Brotherhood of Teamsters never crawled in their lives. When the Mine Workers were on their bellies, we were there to lift them up," Tobin asserted.

Marshall Plan Indorsed

Tobin, who said before the convention opened that his powerful Teamsters Union might have to withdraw from the AFL over the non-Communist affidavit issue, declared today:

"I am proud to stay with the federation, even though the federation may disagree with me. I don't believe in secession from the AFL. The thing to do is to stay, not pull out every time something goes against us."

Earlier today, in a sweeping and sharply worded indictment of Soviet foreign policy, the convention indorsed the Marshall Plan for European relief, demanded abolition of the United Nations veto, and called for Government speculative curbs in the grain markets if voluntary cooperation fails.

The AFL approved international assistance to vanquished as well as victor nations abroad as recommended in a report of the committee on international labor relations, presented by Vice President Matthew Woll.

"The time is past when the labor movement of any country can safely refrain from interesting itself in national foreign policy and maintaining positive standards by which that policy can be determined," declared the report.

Preservation of world peace, the committee stated, is "directly dependent upon immediate American economic aid as envisaged in the proposal of Secretary of State Marshall."

and sponsons badly weakened," the message continued. "Pilot deems future takeoffs not possible."

The message praised the rescue efforts of Lieuts. (jg) B. S. Brown and C. S. Hall—not further identified—who "have performed extraordinary boat work."

The plane was operated by American International Airways and was carrying what was described as the largest number of passengers taken on a transatlantic flight.

The Bermuda Sky Queen was on a nonscheduled charter flight, carrying many of its passengers, mostly Britons, to new homes in the United States and Canada. The American International Airways was formed five months ago.

Passengers aboard included seven employes of the United Nations and several employes of the Shell Mex and Anglo-Iranian Oil Companies.

The first word that a rescue had been made was a terse statement from the Bibb and released here by the Coast Guard about eight hours after the plane settled on the heaving water. It said:

"Darkness approaching. Plane leaking. Passengers mostly prostrated by seasickness. Winds of gale force. Rugh sea. Three persons removed unharmed with small life raft. Continuing operations with boat and raft. Second successful boat and raft operations brings total saved thus far to five men, two women, two little boys and one baby. Baby appeared to have stood ordeal better than the rest."

Dellinger Retires

The retirement of Elwood L. Dellinger, Woodstock, Va., from the post of treasurer and member of the Board of Directors of the Shenandoah County Memorial Association has been announced.

Second Storm Nears Coast

the Weather Bureau at Washington placed the second storm's center at about 140 miles east southeast of Charleston, S. C., with little movement indicated since midmorning.

The Weather Bureau advised that this storm indicated a slow northwestward movement, with winds reaching moderate gale force tonight along the coast from North Carolina to the Virginia capes. Highest winds near the storm's center appeared to be 50 to 60 miles per hour.

Miami Threatened By Worst Flood Yet

Miami, Fla., Oct. 14 (AP).—Flood waters from deep in the heart of the Everglades continued to flow toward Miami today as some 100 National Guardsmen and American Legion reserve units patrolled flooded areas west and south of the city.

Relief agencies estimated that between 10,000 and 12,000 persons were homeless from the Hialeah, Miami Springs and Opa Locka sections as the water continued its slow rise.

Sixteen draglines were put in operation along primary and secondary levees as every report indicated from the Lake Okeechobee region that a great mass of water was moving southeastward toward Dade (Miami) County in unprecedented volume.

It was fast becoming apparent there were not adequate facilities for housing all the flood victims. The Miami Beach Hotel Owners Association offered 100 rooms to evacuees, but these would only house a small fraction of those needing shelter.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Tension Eases In Md. Button Plant Strikes

Ridgely, Md., Oct. 14 (Spl.).—Calm prevailed here today and in Federalsburg, where two plants of the Excelsior Pearl Works, Inc., are now being struck by members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL.

The mayor of Ridgely, Martin L. Sutton, said 38 persons worked here today. He declared several of the eight deputies now guarding the plant will be dropped because of the present quiet.

The union leader, Irwin J. Jaffe, assistant regional director, said 31 persons are on strike and only 20 had returned to work. He added that four more have promised to stay away tomorrow.

Jaffee said his union has accepted an invitation from the State Labor Commissioner for a conference between union and management officials on Thursday. The firm declined to comment.

The union man said 180 persons were still on strike at Federalsburg and 72 are at work.

Jaffe said ILGWU officials planned to ask the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election in the plants.

Plea for Sales Tax Vote to Be Argued

In Prince Georges

County Buys U. S. Hospital For $150,000

Purchase of Prince Georges General Hospital from the Federal Government for $150,000 was authorized yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The board was in receipt of a letter from William F. Barrett, acting second division engineer of the Federal Works Agency, informing the commissioners the Government is ready to trade a quit-claim deed and bill of sale for the board's $150,000 offer.

Inventory of the hospital equipment is under way and it is expected the deal will be closed within a few days.

The hospital will be operated as a county hospital, county officials said, in the same manner as now except that the county will have title to the property, which now is under lease from the Federal Government. The title to the property, it was pointed out, will enable the commissioners to proceed with plans for construction of a 110-bed wing for Negro patients, and a public health center.

The hospital was constructed at a cost of approximately $750,000 in 1942-43.

The commissioners will meet at 2 p. m. Tuesday with the county welfare board at the County Service Building, Hyattsville, to discuss welfare problems and policies.

At its meeting yesterday, the board accepted the resignation, because of health, of Desk Clerk Benjamin F. Dowlan of Upper Marlboro police headquarters.

Methodists to Meet

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 14 (Spl.). Several ministers and laymen of this area will attend the one hundred and sixty-fifth session of the Virginia Annual Conference of the Methodist Church which opens in Roanoke Thursday. The conference is scheduled to last until October 21.

Md. Attorney Has Held Levy Is Not Open to Referendum

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Sales Tax Act, apparently slated for discussion at the special legislative session between October 24 and November 1, will be the subject of legal arguments tomorrow in Anne Arundel County Court.

Counsel for four taxpayers will seek a writ to force Secretary of State Bertram L. Boone to put the act up to a people's vote next year.

Attorney General Hall Hammond has ruled the law is not subject to referendum because, he holds, it is an appropriation measure.

The attorney general's staff will defend the act tomorrow in the suit brought by Robert I. Black, Alfred T. Truitt, Herman L. Mills and Henry J. Starr.

Effect Held Doubtful

Just how much effect sales tax talk at the General Assembly will have appears doubtful. Politicians at the State capital believe nothing will disturb the sales tax unless Governor Lane is willing.

He would have to approve any scheme for lessening the tax and returning it to the people somehow if the General Assembly were to get anywhere in legislating.

Two delegates, S. Pete Pollack (D., Balto. Fourth) and Charles M. Bandiere (D., Balto. Fifth), have gone on record that they will offer sales tax related bills.

Pollack would repeal the act and legalize bookmaking as a revenue source and Bandiere would give to Baltimore City and the 23 counties all sales tax receipts above 19 million dollars.

Governor Has Say

It is expected that plans for the special session—to be called principally to deal with Baltimore City's taxing powers—will be made by legislative leaders in conference with the Governor.

If any private sales tax plans are still pushed, the committee system will stand as a big obstacle in their way. If by any chance the Legislature does present a measure the Governor doesn't like, he can always veto it.

In any contest over the sales tax, the legislators would be at a great disadvantage.

When the act was passed at the 1947 session, legislators opposed to it said openly the bill was railroaded through. At that time, it was estimated the tax would bring in $18,400,000 annually. But in September, Comptroller James J. Lacy predicted a return of 25 million dollars on the basis of results up to then.

Baptists to Meet In Three-Day Session

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 14 (Spl.).—The Virginia Corresponding Meeting of Old School Baptist Churches of Loudoun and Fairfax Counties opens a three-day session tomorrow at the New Valley Baptist Church, Lucketts.

Elder H. H. Lefferts, moderator, will preside, G. C. Spindle, of Washington, will serve as clerk. Ministers present will include Elder H. M. Bennett of Mardela, Md.; Elder D. V. Spangler of Danville, Va., and Elder J. C. Hammond, of Charleston, W. Va.

Remembers When

Judge Frees Ex-Pugilist, Now Blind

Felix Distrito, 55, blind former prize fighter known in his heyday as "Little Dempsey" was released by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott on a disorderly charge after the judge recognized him.

The judge not only dismissed his charge but ordered the arresting officer, Park Police Pvt. Eugene Greenfield, to assist Distrito in securing a warrant for the arrest of the man with whom Distrito was fighting at the time of his arrest, September 29.

Distrito has been in Casualty Hospital since the fight in front of his home 610 Massachusetts ave. nw. He appeared in court yesterday morning wearing bandages.

Judge Scott, recognizing him, asked how he had received his injuries. The blind man said that for the past several months a man had been coming to his home trying to rent a room. On the last occasion he refused to leave the house, Distrito said, and a fight ensued.

Private Greenfield said he found the men fighting in front of the house and arrested both of them. He said that he could not find the weapon that was used to stab Distrito so he charged both men with disorderly conduct. The other man forfeited collateral and did not appear in court. Judge Scott ordered his arrest.

Distrito, a Filipino, is the father of 12 children. He took part in more than 300 fights before he lost his sight. He now sells peanuts at sporting events.

Thug Escapes Police Chase at 70-Mile Speed

A yoke robbery, a knife assault, a 70-mile-an-hour chase and a cops-and-robbers fight kept things lively in the early morning hours yesterday in Northwest Washington.

First, John Paul Cornell, 53, of 2305 K st. nw., was yoked in the 1400 block of Massachusetts ave. nw. by two men who robbed him of $7. One of the thugs ran to a nearby alley where a car was parked. In the car were Bruce Harbaugh, 22, of 710 K st. ne., and Waverly M. Williams, 17, of 1345 E st. se.

The thug ordered Harbaugh and Williams from the car, slashing the former on the left knee with a knife to emphasize his demand. Later, Pvts. R. G. Ducote and T. F. Lungregan of the Traffic Division spotted the stolen car racing at 70 miles an hour.

The driver abandoned the car in the 3300 block of P st. nw., and was grabbed by Ducote. However, he broke loose, jumped several fences and escaped.

enants at a meeting of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens group.

Shortly after McNerney's remarks were published, the District Recreation Board sent a reminder to all citizens and civic organizations that meetings which "create unrest" are not permitted in public schools. The Dahlgren Terrace meeting had been held in the Crosby S. Noyes School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne.

Newell made no reference to restrictive covenants last night.

Newell said the white people of Washington have done much for the Negroes and that "the real Washington Negro" is "aware" and "appreciative."

"Then," he asked, "just who is it that is causing all this agitation? Who is it, trying to create among the whites a dislike for colored people, and trying to build up hatred, on the part of the colored, against the whites?

"If this agitation were only the natural desire of some of our population to lift themselves to higher social standards, it would indeed be more excusable.

Not the Case Here

"But this does not seem to be the case, at least here in Washington. The loudest agitation seems to emanate from some who are very recent sojourners in our city, and, I regret to say, some of them are white."

Newell declared that "certain organizations" in Washington, "financed by some well-guarded source," appear to be seeking all possible friction between the races to further "their own nefarious plans."

"The intelligent colored people," he said, "are not a part of this movement, and furthermore, are not in sympathy with the tactics used. They fully realize that the great strides forward their race is making are only a natural evolution. As they deserve more and more recognition, they should and will receive it.

"The uninformed Negro, usually a newcomer here, unfortunately does not grasp just what is being done to him by these unscrupulous agitators.

"He becomes an easy mark for these schemers who are interested in him only to make him a pawn or dupe so that, in the name of social democracy, which is but another name for communism, they can carry out their plans to bring about, right here in our Nation's Capital, the same condition that befell France and other European countries.

Pattern for U. S. Seen

"These plotters believe that if they can get a firm foothold in Washington, the rest of the country will follow suit. The colored person—or the white—who allows himself to become affiliated with such un-American organizations is hindering the best development of his race, be he white or colored."

Newell said he has no personal "feeling of animosty" toward Negroes and that all "well-meaning white people" in the District share that belief.

He declared he has the highest admiration "for all of the colored race who are honestly making an effort to elevate themselves and become good American citizens."

But he saw this as the stumbling block:

"The only thing that mars and handicaps this progress is the fact that while some have attained splendid results, many have failed to keep in step, and there are some who would endeavor to apply to the whole colored race this fine advance and stride toward citizenship whether or not all are entitled to this deserved recognition."

Facilities Taxed

Newell pointed out that first the depression and then the war had swelled the District's population so that now "our every facility has been taxed to the limit."

Now new homes are being built and the shortages are being eased, he added. But—

"There is only one hitch to this," plainable reason there are those in our country today who no longer desire to continue the good old traditions of our Republic and make their homes in an environment suitable and in keeping with their social customs and ways of life, but seem intent on forcing themselves into communities where the residents live in a manner quite contrary to their way."

Washington, the Federation president said, was "originally a typical Southern city, with all the traditions and manners of living in the South." He said the city continued to follow Southern ways closely up to the first world war.

"Many of our families, both white and colored, adhered to the natural state of segregation," he said. "The white people preferred to live in communities of white residents. The colored people seemed to prefer this same arrangement so they could live by themselves."

Respect 'Old Residents'

Newell said he has the "highest respect" for many Negroes who are "old residents" in Washington. He declared "in no instance do I find colored people of this type trying to move into white neighborhoods. They are established and often leaders in their own locality, bringing up their children to be good, respectable and valuable citizens."

"But there is another class of colored people who are making every effort to move into white sections," he continued. "Surely, metropolitan Washington is almost limitless in area and there are plenty of places where they can build their homes if they are prudent and economical where they should want to build them, among their own people.

"I often hear about the 'underprivileged people.' Just who are these people? Are they common laborers getting $1 an hour? Or housemaids getting $20 or $25 a week?

"Have you tried in the past few years to get some little job done, like having your lawn mowed or some repair work done? I have, and I fail to know where the 'under-privileged' are.

"Of course, if people insist on living beyond their means and spend money for pleasure when it could be used more wisely, they can't be expected to be interested in buying a home for their families.

"For example, the other day, the press reported the crowds were so great around the Howard Theater (colored movie house, by the way) that a large number of police were required to keep order. Were these people our 'under-privileged'?"

Stopping The Gap

It would be wrong to read any settlement of the stopgap crisis in western Europe in the announcement of the Export-Import Bank. No new money has been granted to France. All that has been done is to divert, at the suggestion of the French, and within the terms of reference on which the bank operates, some 93 million dollars of the outstanding amount of the 650-million-dollar credit that was extended to France last year. The time limit of the credit ends next June. It was all to go for purposes of reconstruction, but conditions have changed in certain respects, as, for instance, in contracts that were let to certain American manufacturers for goods that cannot be delivered within the period of the availability of the credit. Accordingly, with the concurrence of American manufacturers, the French arranged for a shift in the purposes for which remaining funds are to be used, and the Export-Import Bank agreed.

The arrangement marks no departure from the rules of the bank which hold the institution to loans that give "reasonable assurance" of repayment. Industrial recovery was the purpose of the reconstruction credit. It is the purpose of the diversion of the undisbursed fund of 93 million dollars. But for want of coal, petroleum and lubricants, nonferrous metals, and synthetic rubber—the materials for which the 93 million dollars will be utilized—many plants in France, far from being revived, are in danger of being closed down. Moreover, this diversion of existing resources available to the French will not satisfy the clamant need to keep French industry in general in operation. New money is needed for this purpose, and, if it is not made available, the stopgap crisis will remain hanging over both the policy as well the economy of France. This is the view of the French situation which is sustained by all the American officials and diplomats with whom the President has been conferring in the last week but in coping with which no concrete solution has as yet been forthcoming.

Ships For Europe

Senator Brewster's suggestion that the huge ghost fleets of surplus Liberty ships such as those tied up in the James River above Norfolk be turned over to European nations in lieu of building new boats under the Marshall Plan deserves the fullest consideration. We now have more than 1000 ships, aggregating some 10 million tons, gathering rust and barnacles in storage. Making these ships available now would have the advantage of immediacy in meeting a shipping shortage which otherwise could not be overcome by new construction under the Marshall Plan until 1951. It would also relieve some of the strain on our steel capacity that would be implicit in the building of new ships.

The proposal must be viewed, of course, in terms of the long-term requirements of our own national defense. The Maritime Commission, which owns these ships, is charged with maintaining an adequate merchant marine. Certainly we should avoid any action which might reduce our merchant marine to the deplorably low level it reached prior to the war. Another point is that many of these ships are in disrepair and would require both work and money to make them seaworthy. Also, Liberty ships are relatively slow. Undoubtedly the preference of most nations would be for new and faster ships.

We do not think any of these objections outweighs the manifest advantages in the Brewster proposal. In the first place, there is little probability that these surplus ships ever again will be used either in American commercial traffic or for national defense. These vessels are the culls after American shipping firms have picked over Government-owned freighters. These companies could hardly object, it seems to us, if other countries were to use the vessels which they themselves have seen unfit to charter or purchase. Our shipping interests cannot reasonably expect to continue forever their present virtual monopoly occasioned by the destruction of European shipping.

Nor could the European nations object with much merit, whatever their ultimate preferences, because of the advantage in prompt possession of the surplus ships. For instance, they would be able to carry their own cargoes from this country, paying crews in their own currency. More than half the dollar cost to European governments for, say, coal, is now in the charges for transportation across the Atlantic, charges that are inevitable so long as cargoes are carried only in American ships. Obviously here is a way to overcome a big factor in the dollar drain. An additional benefit in transfer of these Liberty ships is that they would enable needy countries to import bulky surplus foods, such as potatoes, on which transportation charges hitherto have been prohibitive.

Altogether we hope that the Administration and Congress will explore the Brewster proposal thoroughly when they consider means of implementing the Marshall Plan. It seems to offer a way to reduce the burden on American taxpayers and at the same time give Europe meaningful help now rather than three or four years hence.

Mr. Byrnes' Lowdown

It is a favorite thesis of Soviet propagandists that if President Roosevelt had lived, there would not have been any deterioration in our relations with Soviet Russia. The whole trouble in the world is traced to the "warmongering" of the men who came after Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Byrnes' book, Speaking Frankly, which is out today, and the first installment of which appears elsewhere in The Washington Post, is a good antidote for this "line." Our relations started to go sour before Mr. Roosevelt died. Indeed, the implication emerges strongly out of the Byrnes volume that Mr. Roosevelt's end was hastened by his dissension with the Generalissimo. This taught him that his trust had been betrayed.

A Roosevelt-Stalin tilt marked the last act of the epical life that Mr. Roosevelt lived. Mr. Roosevelt's very last communication, to be sure, was couched in his mood of habitual optimism, being a word of counsel to Mr. Churchill to be "firm" and yet "patient" (words that came to be very familiar!) in dealing with problems arising with Soviet Russia; Mr. Churchill then would then find that most of them "straightened out." But the occasion for this advice lacked any of the elements that made for hope. It had become apparent, in connection with Poland and liberated Europe, that Moscow had no intention of living up to the commitments that it undertook at Yalta. While Mr. Roosevelt was engaged in reassuring Mr. Churchill, the State Department and the Foreign Office were preparing a joint protest to Stalin on his flat refusal to agree that American and British observers be allowed in Poland.

Troubles with Moscow did not come singly then, any more than they do now, though they have multiplied with the passing of time. Between the running fire of arguments over Yalta, Mr. Roosevelt had to deal with an incident that "particularly disturbed" him. Stalin accused Roosevelt of a double-cross in preliminary surrender arrangements with Marshal Kesselring in Italy. Alas, the text is omitted—an omission that we regret from the standpoint of public education. Roosevelt, who "deeply resented" the accusation, replied that the "vile misrepresentations" of Stalin's informers reflected upon the President himself. To a "more conciliatory" message from Stalin the President replied, in a message that just preceded the message to Mr. Churchill, in words that he chose to regard as the end of the controversy.

Patience and firmness! This was the formula, set forth by Mr. Roosevelt himself, that marked Mr. Byrnes' diplomacy throughout his negotiations with the Russians, a formula that was later to be pilloried by the Wallaceites. No man could have been more patient. Whether he was sufficiently firm must be left to the historian to determine. Mr. Byrnes' policy was based upon the need to keep up peace negotiations in respect of Germany and Austria; and when he was thwarted by Soviet unwillingness to talk seriously, he turned to the treaties with Italy and the satellite powers. In these negotiations he gave way on some American diplomatic positions, as, for instance, Trieste, that the enemies of compromise felt should have been defended rather than accommodated. However, it was his feeling that these arrangements would bring the day nearer of German and Austrian settlements and the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Europe.

These same critics are also dubious about the procedure of going ahead with the minor treaties, saying that it would have been more realistic to engage in a diplomatic battle of nerves on the necessity of dealing first with Austria. Again the argument is not susceptible of settlement. For a Russo-American stalemate would have had incalculable consequences, and the American people, who were then only half aware of the ambitions of the Kremlin imperialists, would not have supported a sort of dead-end diplomacy.

What of the future? On the whole the outlook appears to Mr. Byrnes to be as bleak as his account is grim. Mr. Byrnes does not hide his gloom over the prospects of peacemaking at the November meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, the organ he sponsored for that purpose. He is sure only that firmness must not slacken, and must be put ahead of patience, for the Soviet aim, as Mr. Byrnes sees it, is to have "in all European states a sufficient number of organized Communists so that they can dictate the policies of these states." Firmness, he thinks, can stop Soviet expansion, but he suspends judgment upon the crucial question of whether cooperation is possible. He would first engage in a test, by again asking the Soviet to join us in a 25-year four-power pact to keep Germany disarmed. If the Russians refuse to accept it, then, in Mr. Byrnes's somber but discreet words, the United States would have reason to worry about the future.

It is clear from Mr. Byrnes' book, which is as fresh and lively as the morning newspaper, and could be used to provide paragraph inserts in the tempestuous news of the day, that the pattern of our relations with Russia would have been the same even if Mr. Roosevelt had lived, for Mr. Roosevelt had obviously come to the end of his rope on appeasement.

Returning The Dead

No American can view the flags at half-mast commemorating the return of our first contingent of war dead without a renewed appreciation of their sacrifice. It detracts not one whit from the honor due these men to say that sentimentality attending the somber display, not to mention the rebirth of grief it occasions for many families, is wholly unnecessary. The remembrance of our dead is something that will remain in people's hearts, wherever the bodies are physically. Indeed, as we have said before, to us it seems a desecration of the cemeteries abroad, and a sort of breach of final trust with the dead, to disinter their broken bodies and commence the whole sad process of burial again in this country.

Be that as it may, the decision to return the dead has been made with respect to the 3000 bodies already returned and to many more on the way. This has been an intensely personal matter for relatives to determine. We do not doubt that it was a painful choice for many. Perhaps some families will derive consolation from the return that they could not have gotten otherwise. In any case, the decision, once made, must be respected and no one should question it.

Nevertheless, we think Congress owes it to other families, who have not yet made the decision, to render the choice less difficult. That could be done by permitting next-of-kin to make a pilgrimage to cemeteries abroad before deciding what they want done. The law now permits such trips only in lieu of returning the dead. We feel that could these bereaved people see for themselves the green cemeteries, tended perpetually by Americans and grateful natives alike, they would agree with Mrs. George Patton that the last comradeship of the dead should not be disturbed. Those families who have elected to leave the graves untouched can take comfort in the words of people in France and Belgium after the first war, that they would forever revere and care for the dead remaining as they would their own sons.

One-Year Extension

No one who has any intimate acquaintance with Washington's housing shortage could reasonably pretend that the need for rent control here will end next March 31. Considering the continued scarcity of some building materials, it would be utterly impossible to construct enough houses in the next six months to satisfy the city's pent-up demands. Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell merely stated the obvious, therefore, when he noted in his annual report that rent control in Washington should continue through 1948. We wonder, indeed, why he suggested only a nine-months extension of the present law. It seems to us that it should be extended until March 31, 1949, so that if a further extension should then appear necessary Congress would be in session to deal with the problem.

Since last spring the local rent control office has been making numerous upward adjustments in the rents that tenants must pay. It is almost everywhere recognized that, with operating expenses rising sharply since the war, some increases were essential. Whether the adjustments have been too rapid or too slow depends largely upon the individual point of view. But one thing is certain this gradual relaxation of the more rigid wartime controls has a great advantage over any abrupt abandonment of controls. Mr. Cogswell reports that the difference between rent increases requested by landlords and those granted by the rent control office amounts to $426,500. In this fact we have at least a suggestion of what would happen if all controls should be removed when the present act expires next March, and that should be sufficient to prompt a one-year extension.

Job And The Man

Suddenly, as the result of the establishment of the new Communist "Information Bureau" in Belgrade, now being called Cominform, the job of our information service in the State Department has assumed a new significance to Americans who had hitherto been indifferent to this activity. The new importance of the work is being recognized in the State Department. And a wide and intensive quest is afoot to find the right man to head it in succession to Mr. Benton. The appointee, whoever he is, will probably find the task with Congress easier than Mr. Benton did. Judging from the comments of returning Congressmen—Representative Mundt says all the members of his group are now convinced backers of the information program—a more sympathetic attitude on the part of Congress is to be expected, though we doubt whether Representative Taber himself has changed his views. Mr. Taber seems to have a phobia against Government activities in information and research which may yet be proof against the facts that should have been apparent to him in Europe.

Be this as it may, the ability to get along with Congress is only one of the qualifications for the information post. Ideally the occupant must be steeped in world history and world affairs, he must be a good administrator, he must be bold and imaginative in his operations, and he must have an evangelical temperament. He must envisage himself as a front-line fighter, in conflict with the Cominform. Such an administrator, for instance, would appreciate the significance of the present year as the 100th anniversary of the issue of Marx's Communist Manifesto, which, as to most of its planks, has been realized in capitalist countries. He would seek to give domestic news to such people as the Romanians who are dwelling in darkness. We hope the right man can be found for this great task.

"Sales Tax And A Loan"

In your editorial of October 11, you very aptly point out the discriminatory and deficient aspects of the present local income tax law and then paradoxically request relief in the form of an even more discriminatory and more deficient sales tax.

It is generally accepted by both professional and amateur economists that the sales tax hits heavily the lower income groups and benefits particularly the upper income groups. You state, "The House has repeatedly demonstrated that it has no intention of permitting the personal income tax to be fairly applied. The only reasonable course left open, in our opinion, is to repeal that tax and substitute for it the sales tax." Just why is this the only reasonable course?

Because no new and more equitable personal income tax law is likely to be forthcoming from the House, you advocate a new and less equitable method of taxation—the sales tax. You say you prefer the sales tax to inadequate city services and proceed with the statement, "Even with additional revenue from a sales tax, however, very few of the public improvements that the city so urgently needs could be financed."

You are in effect telling the lower income recipients on whom the sales tax will fall most heavily, "We want to give the residents of this city improved public services, but under our present income tax law we cannot raise the necessary funds. We are, therefore, asking you, the lower income recipients, to take up the burden via a sales tax. However, we will not guarantee you that there will be enough additional revenue from this sales tax to finance these urgently needed public services."

In accordance with accepted standards of good government, taxation should be based on the principle of ability to pay embodied in the progressive income tax. Let us put all our efforts in effecting a fair and equitable District personal income tax law.

"Wheat and Whisky"

If the purpose of your editorial of October 7, "Wheat and Whisky," was to curry favor with the proponents of prohibition, its aim was no doubt accomplished.

You speak of whisky as "an agreeable luxury" which the people might readily do without in order to add to the grains going overseas to feed the hungry. Before the people who drink whisky would come to the point of having to do without, there would be myriad illicit stills operating all over the land, using corn and wheat and rice and barley and rye, to say nothing of sugar, raisins, prunes, and what have you? And such stills would use much more grain per gallon of product than the highly efficient legal distilleries use.

Furthermore, why should just one "agreeable luxury" be sacrificed while others remain undisturbed? What do the many thousands of race horses and saddle horses of our Nation eat that could not be fed to fattening hogs, cattle and sheep, to release wheat and corn for human consumption overseas? How much food fit for human consumption do the 15 million dogs of the country eat? It takes grain to produce the milk daily fed to our millions of useless cats.

Compared with the rest of the world, we Americans live in considerable luxury. We ought to make sacrifices as necessary to aid the needy abroad. We ought to drink less whisky and beer, if doing so is necessary in order that the rest of the world may be spared the pangs of starvation. But to propose that the distillers and the brewers shut down their plants and cease using grain, while Argentina's granaries are full of wheat for which a price of $6 per bushel is being demanded, and other consuming industries in this country are allowed to continue, is just economic folderol.

Uganda Homeland

At no other time was there a greater necessity to give to Jewry of all nations the possibility of acquiring a homeland of their own. Palestine has an area of one fifth of Illinois and cannot house as many as would be necessary in the present conditions. Palestine will and must remain a shrine for the Jews and the Christians alike, but a much greater territory is needed for a Jewish state.

In years gone the British protectorate of Uganda in East Africa was offered for the Jewish colonization and Mr. Lloyd George heartily supported this plan. Unfortunately, it was rejected by strict Zionists who wanted Palestine and nothing else. This stand must be revised now. Uganda has a territory of almost half of France, with good climate, fertile soil and is rich in minerals and abundant fisheries. It is sparsely populated (less than four million, mostly natives), but advanced in civilization.

Once settled in Uganda as their own state, the Jews could peacefully arrange with the Arabs as to the use of Palestine as a shrine for them.

Army UMT Bill

The War Department has for several years been engaged in a campaign for universal military training in which it has made certain claims. One claim was that universal military training would make unnecessary a large standing Army. In spite of this the Army-sponsored bill, H. R. 4278, states specifically that all military personnel detailed for duty with the "Compulsory Military Training Corps," be "in addition to and in excess of the authorized strength allotted to the Regular Army, Navy and Marine Corps."

The Army also claimed that boys drafted under such a law would be training and not in service. Nevertheless the Army-sponsored bill provides that at the end of six months most boys will go into the National Guard or some other reserve component. Section 109 of the bill provides that nothing "shall in any way limit or prohibit the call to active service in the armed forces of any person who is a member of a regular or reserve component of the armed forces."

In other words, boys who went into the National Guard or any reserve component instead of staying for another six months in Army camps, could, without an act of Congress, be called into the armed forces.

Much publicity appeared in the press about the experimental UMT camp at Fort Knox.

However, the Army-sponsored bill is very different from the proposal described by Army publicity.

"Trial By Whimsy"

My attention has been called to an unsigned editorial appearing in The Washington Post of October 5 entitled "Trial by Whimsy."

The editorial writer employs standard Communist technique in his defense of certain individuals whom he does not name, and charges which he neither specifies nor refutes. He does not refer to an unnamed Congressman, however. He sobs about what it will mean to these men to lose their jobs but he does not indicate what the potentialties are of having such men at sensitive posts in militarily important areas.

I did not make the records of Heinz Norden and George Shaw Wheeler. They made them of their own free will under our democratic way of life. They chose to align themselves with the enemies of democracy, with the supporters of the newly reconstituted Communist International. They should suffer the consequences.

My speech dealing with these men is a matter of open public record and is published in the Congressional Record of July 9, 1947, on page 8734. Why did you not reprint the charges I made with a point-by-point refutation of them?

You state that an AMG Loyalty Board cleared these men. I have written to the Secretary of Defense for the basis of such clearance. If history is any guide such clearances have in a number of instances been based upon unsatisfactory grounds. It will be remembered, for example, that Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell, head of Military Intelligence, appearing before the House Committee on Military Affairs, defended the granting of commissions to Communists on the grounds that they were defending democracy "by force and violence."

On May 23, 1944, the attention of the Senate Military Affairs Committee was called to instructions issued by Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Deputy Chief of Staff, to forward all espionage, sabotage, and subversive files to Washington for their destruction. According to a report of J. Anthony Panuch, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of State in charge of security matters, Carl Aldo Marzani, recently convicted of concealing his Communist record, was cleared and recommended by Maj. Gen. Otto Nelson. A short time later these Communists were leading GI demonstrations against the duly constituted military authorities resulting in a serious depletion of our forces and the weakening of strength behind our foreign policy.

Under the circumstances and in the light of the provable records of these men, I cannot understand how you can accept a blanket clearance of the AMG Loyalty Board. In fact I believe that such a loyalty board is itself open to serious question from a standpoint of fitness if no other.

Since you have raised the question I would like nothing better than to reopen the entire unsavory record of the case of George Shaw Wheeler, his use of politically like-minded associates to stampede a hesitant Civil Service Commission into reversing itself after having an adverse report on his loyalty. I would like nothing better than to make public the record of this entire proceeding regardless of whom it may involve. And if I get a chance during the coming session of Congress I propose to do it.

In closing, may I ask certain questions? Will your editorial writer disclose the source of his information on these cases? Is your editorial writer a member of the pro-Communist wing of the Washington Newspaper Guild? Is your editorial writer habitually addicted to the defense of Communist-inspired causes through the medium of your columns? In the face of the open hostility of international Communist forces toward the American Government and our entire way of life, how can The Washington Post in good conscience defend those who are Communist in their loyalties?

GEORGE A. DONDERO,
Congressman from Michigan.
Royal Oak, Mich.

Editor's Note: In response to Mr. Dondero's only nonrhetorical question, the source of the information in these cases was the Associated Press.

Education For Princesses

By Malvina Lindsay

Juliana Faces Ahead

HER DUTCH subjects say proudly of their sturdy, intrepid Queen Wilhelmina, "She is a real Orangian!" Crown Princess Juliana, who is now to head a regency as her mother retires, may not be a daughter of the House of Orange in exactly the same pattern as Wilhelmina. But she is showing what the Dutch call the Orange audacity in the way she is educating her daughters.

By sending the two elder of her four daughters, Beatrix, 10, and Irene, 8, to the Kees Boeken "work community," the Crown Princess is lining up with a democratic educational movement that may be the hope of a new Europe. It has special significance now that the world is being split apart on the issue of human liberty.

The work community emphasizes mental freedom for children. It is a reaction from the formal, classical, authoritarian teaching that so long prevailed in Europe, that made futile snobs out of intellectuals, and that developed two mental worlds. The "do this," "believe that" system made a fertile field for the growth of fascism. If continued, it would prove equally fertile for all types of totalitarian dogma.

BEFORE Princess Juliana sent her daughters to the Kees Boeken work community near Bilthoven, many Dutch burghers looked on it as an educational fad. Now it is being taken more seriously by them. The work community system is spreading through the Netherlands, Denmark, Britain and other countries, and an international federation of such projects has been formed.

Kees Boeken, founder of the community, formerly was an engineer. Dissatisfied with adult products of education, he originated his work community in which children could learn by doing. His system has much in common with progressive and creative schools in this country, though it has some differences. It has no teachers, rather leaders, as they call themselves, who help the children work out projects designed to teach them geography, history, languages, other subjects. Its chief aim, according to its exponents, is to develop strong, healthy personalities free of fear or prejudice, to encourage initiative, and to give children experience in living and working together in a democratic way.

The Dutch princesses are reported as entering enthusiastically into all this. They sing in the choirs, take part in the plays, which often have public performances. Beatrix, whom the Dutch describe as a "strong, audacious" child, is especially athletic. For some time she has been a Girl Scout.

Princess Juliana takes active part in the school doings that involve parents. Like mothers everywhere she faithfully goes through the ordeal of attending parties her children's schoolmates give.

MANY Hollanders believe that the Crown Princess is seeking to give her daughters a contact with life that as a child she lacked. An only child brought up in palace seclusion, she was taught by governesses until she was 18, when she entered Leiden University. Always overshadowed by the strong personality of the Queen, she has been affectionately regarded by the Dutch as a sweet, motherly type, and they have especially rejoiced in her desire for a large family.

Yet she is also mentally keen and farseeing, say those who know her, and since her marriage to Prince Bernhard she has shown increasing tendency to follow her own modern ideas. Her espousal of work community education, it is pointed out, shows her awareness that a new and different Europe is in the making, and that children, including Princesses, will need to be equipped to stand on their own feet, get on with their fellows, and be able to practice and uphold democratic processes.

Like many other Europeans who had classical education in the old rigid manner, Juliana seems to be recognizing that what a child is has become more important than what he knows, and that the educated can no longer be fenced in mentally or socially but must be able to work with and influence those with whom they must live. At least her attitude on the upbringing of her daughters promises that in her new position of leadership she will stand with those who keep their faces forward.

Danger Of Disarmament

The most important part of Mr. Norman Thomas' letter of October 8 lies in wishful thinking. For instance, how can Mr. Thomas reasonably expect the sovereign states of the West to disarm, as desirable as that may be, when the Soviet Union is bending every effort to expand its munitions output and its armies? Of what avail a "ringing appeal" to the peoples of the world in the face of that one fact?

If Mr. Thomas were only to consider objectively the very brutal and ugly facts of power politics, he would readily understand how futile ideal wishes really are. In coping with the intransigence of the Soviet Union at its every point of contact with the outside world, whether in Flushing Meadows, Rome or Berlin.

This amoral despotism can be "contained," if at all, only through the unity of purpose of all the western world. This unity would consolidate such productive wealth and peoples as to make too great the cost of further depredations against the West.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Reveille For Revelers

PARIS.—From the vantage point of France, the United States has the aspect of a vast communal fair or feast rather like the revels the old Flemish painters liked to depict. All are intent upon the good things spread before them. All are greedy to drink down the good seemingly endlessly poured out for them. And thus all are blind to the specter lurking like a dark cloud upon the bright horizon.

In these reports from Europe, the major emphasis has been placed, as it should be placed, upon the political and strategic threats arising from the European economic crisis. But it is now time to point out that the danger is also economic—that if we continue to indulge our weakness for half measures, for being too little and too late, the result is likely to sweep from our own tables all the good things, all the good cheer which we are so complacently enjoying. In Paris, even more than in Rome, the possibility is evident of a world-wide crash more shattering, more irreversible and more certain to engulf the United States in the end than the world crash of the Hoover years.

It is repetitious but needful to begin by saying that in France, as in Italy, the trouble arises from a monthly trading deficit with the rest of the world which the French no longer have the dollars, gold or credits to cover. Whereas in Italy the deficit is between 45 and 55 million dollars per month, it is about 120 million dollars monthly or a little more in France.

Moreover, this is a dollar deficit in the strictest sense, with the soft money areas of the world, France's trade is currently in favorable balance. But like Italy, she can only get wheat to feed her people, coal, most of her petroleum, certain raw materials and special equipment for her factories, by laying dollars or gold on the line. There is hardly a nation left in the world, except the United States, that can pay for French goods with dollars. American purchases in France are relatively trivial, and since France, again like Italy, can only get coal and wheat for dollars, the French economy simply cannot operate at all without dollar loans to cover the monthly deficits for the present.

THIS IS the important thing to understand. The commodities bought with dollars are so vital that without them not merely France's trade with us, but the whole of France's economic life will come to an almost dead stop. Obviously this must occur, if there is only half enough bread for the people and half enough coal for the factories.

What is worse, the process will by no means end there. If the economic life of France and Italy grinds to a stop, the British, the South Americans, the people of the Benelux countries, the Mexicans, the Canadians and the rest, will be unable either to sell to or buy from France and Italy. Thus these precarious economies will also be knocked out of kilter. The economic disease will spread like a new black death, carrying with it always the same hunger and the same social disruption.

Even if such matters had been understood in the seventeenth century, the British in their distant island would no doubt have thought themselves immune when the great European epidemic of the bubonic plague first declared itself in distant Russia. But they were not. No more shall we be immune from this new economic plague if we permit it to gain impetus.

CANADA, our neighbor and best trading partner, is already beginning to suffer from the dollar shortage, as are Mexico and all of South America. Everywhere our exports are in imminent danger. Foolish Americans say that exports are only 10 or 12 per cent of our total business. But who supposes that with a serious depression across the border in Canada, Detroit will be immune? Who can forget the obvious case of depression neurosis that affects many leaders of American business in mid-boom? Who does not remember that even Hoover called the last crash a world trouble? Who is so silly, finally, as to discount the psychological effect on American business of the ghastly panorama of the whole rest of the western world involved in chaos, and every kind of political danger lurking in the ruins?

President Truman and the others who are nervously debating half measures of remedy in Washington must certainly have all this in mind. But half measures are not enough. France, again like Italy, is in a fairly advanced stage of monetary inflation.

Even now the French government, hampered though it is by a lack of authority, has requested the brilliant Jean Monnet to prepare a plan of national stabilization. The outlines of a wise and decisive stabilization plan are already visible, but inflation will become completely uncontrollable before stabilization can begin, if there are to be heavy cuts in the bread ration and widespread unemployment. And this will be inevitable if we go on telling the French, "Grin and bear it and we shall help you eight months from now." In this event the crash will come anyway. And we, too, shall pay in the end for our own folly.

American Correspondents In Europe

Childs

PARIS.—An important channel of understanding between Europe and America is the American press. The American newspapermen and women in Europe who write from day to day about European events are a definite part of our representation aboard.

This may be a prejudiced point of view but it seems to me they are fully as important a part of our representation as the American Diplomatic Corps. And in some places they rate a lot higher.

Their chief job is to report what is happening from day to day for American readers. But for many Europeans the American reporter is a kind of outpost representing a press that has as its goal objectivity and freedom of expression in the news columns. It often falls far short of that goal, but the fact remains that it is the goal.

Larry Allen, correspondent for the Associated Press in Warsaw, is an example. For months the Polish government conducted a vicious personal campaign against him in the Polish press and on the radio.

The Communist-controlled government was furious because Allen was reporting the facts as he saw them. But Allen stuck it out. He is still in Warsaw reporting the facts as he sees them and the great majority of the Polish people know it.

As an American citizen Allen tries to steer clear of the tangle of political prejudices that becloud everything in Poland. If he were a Pole, this would be difficult or impossible, —a fact which points up the importance of sending trained American reporters to Europe.

REPORTERS for the press associations work under great pressure, particularly when a big story is breaking. One of the ablest in the business over here is Edward Murray, head of the United Press Bureau in Rome. When Trieste was in the news recently, as the territorial provisions of the Peace Treaty took effect, Murray worked at least 14 hours a day at top speed.

Part of the pressure is for the kind of story which will make sensational headline. This pressure is responsible for one of the weaknesses of American reporting out of Europe. Everything tends to get told in terms of bing-bing-bing-bing, the cowboys are coming to save the heroine from the bandits.

Correspondents who do not have to work under that kind of pressure do a more mature job of reporting. They are able to tell American readers what happens before the shooting begins if it does finally begin.

In Greece and the Near East such reporters as Philip Potter of the Baltimore Sun and George Polk of the Columbia Broadcasting System send out day-to-day reports that place developing events in a larger frame of understanding. This same type of reporting comes from M. W. Fodor of The Washington Post, who has for so long made the Balkans his beat.

Papers such as the New York Times, the New York Herald Tribune, the Christian Science Monitor and the Chicago Daily News send out American correspondents who have only one assignment—to get the news. It is not an easy assignment. The correspondent must constantly buck the myriad regulations which require an official permit, duly stamped and taxed, to sneeze.

TRAVELING ABOUT Europe means visas and exit visas. It means difficult reservations and long and tiresome waiting for planes that are delayed or canceled. It means an infinity of customs inspection and money control, most of which is absurdly futile since the big operators seem always to circumvent the regulations.

Yet in spite of all this the correspondent manages to learn a great deal about what is going on. A good example is the reporting Harold Callender has done out of Paris for the New York Times on the 16-nation conference that formulated the Marshall Plan. Again and again Callender broke through the official silence which was mistakenly imposed to get the news.

The press association reporter is likely to be a salesman for his service in the country in which he is stationed as well as a reporter. This can mean a handicap in getting out an objective news report which other reporters do not have.

Six days a week here in Paris the New York Herald Tribune publishes a newspaper that contains more real news than all the Paris papers rolled into one and with a big margin to spare. It is a first-rate American newspaper. On its editorial page it reprints editorials not merely from the parent New York edition, but from papers of varying shades of opinion throughout America.

That may be one reason why the Paris Herald is a "must" for government officials not merely in France, but throughout Europe. They can get an idea of American opinion. And they can also see how American newspapers—or most of them—print the news without regard to opinion. On the news side, the headline for Molotov is as big as it is for Marshall.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Hours Change Planned At Interior

INTERIOR: Secretary Krug wants to change the working hours of his employes. He has proposed to the Budget Bureau that his employes be placed on an 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. schedule. Interior hours are now 7:45 to 4:15.

Kluttz

The Secretary told the Budget Bureau that the present workday was "inconvenient" to other Federal agencies here as well as to Interior's field offices in the West. Budget will approve the change, providing Capital Transit Co. can handle the transportation problem at the proposed new hours. The company has opposed other major changes.

STATE: Its salary structure is being looked into by a dozen congressional investigators who are examining personnel records and the staffing of its various offices.

At least one of the investigators dropped a hint that they are working on a clew that State salaries are "overclassified" and they are looking for evidence to support that belief.

It seems to me that Congress would be more helpful if it would assist the department in retaining its able people and securing others of high caliber instead of launching a program to discourage and drive out some of its best people by pressure to force down salaries.

MERGER: Out of the several aviation studies now in progress comes talk of a proposed Department of Air to be made up of the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Civil Aeronautics Board. Both of the civil aviation agencies are in the Commerce Department. But how an independent aviation agency could solve the aviation industry's financial problems is something of a mystery.

PATENT OFFICE: It has never had a uniform system of promotions. But the new commissioner, Lawrence C. Kingsland, has promised to do something about it—on this condition:

That the employes step up production and wipe out the big backlog of applications for patents. And production is growing. The staff is now clearing about as many applications as are filed. But the office is still about two years behind in its work.

Meantime, this agency continues to grow. It had 1291 employes in July, 1945. It has 1900 now, and it expects to have 2200 by June 30. Patent is one agency that pays its own freight.

BUDGET: I was in error when I reported here Monday that staff members of the Senate Appropriations Committee were sitting in on agency budget hearings at the Budget Bureau. Instead, the agreement reached by Chairman Bridges and the Budget Bureau provides:

That when the President has approved the final budget and before it's sent to Congress, the Budget Bureau staff will meet with the Senate staff to explain all the factors and conditions which the bureau took into consideration before it okayed the final budget . . . A similar arrangement probably will be worked out with the House Appropriations Committee staff.

NAVY: It has raised from $10,000 to $14,000 a year the salaries of two of its top civilian scientists who are:

Dr. Ralph D. Bennett, technical director of the Naval Ordance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., and Dr. Louis Thompson, technical director of the Naval Ordnance Test Station at Inyokern, Calif.

Their salaries were lifted under the recent law which permits the Army and the Navy to pay up to $15,000 to each of 45 topflight scientists.

TRAVEL: A joint study of travel procedures and regulations is being made by the General Accounting Office, Treasury and the Budget Bureau.

Each Federal worker who must travel hopes the study will result in a more liberal expense allowance. The flat rate is now $6 a day to pay hotel and meal costs, most inadequate in these times of soaring prices.

A Federal employe I know told me that it had cost him $67.50 over and above the $6 per diem to make a recent 13-day trip. And he's a careful spender. His office suggested that he make a similar trip to another group of States. He pulled out an itemized account of the cost of his 13-day trip and replied:

"I simply can't afford to do it."

His boss, an understanding fellow, agreed.

PEOPLE: Donald R. Ellis is the new budget officer at the Patent Office. He transferred from Agriculture's efficient budget office . . . Joe Juran, a former war agency official who is now a New York University professor, will speak tomorrow night at a dinner meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Management to be held in the YWCA . . . Roger Barnes is in line to be the next chief economist at Federal Trade . . . Helen M. Steele is the new librarian for the Labor Department.

UPWA: This left-wing public worker union will urge the CIO convention in Boston to oppose the President's Federal worker loyalty program. The convention is sure to support a pay raise for Federal workers.

GOP Should Ask Program Of Candidates, Stassen Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Harold E. Stassen said yesterday that the Republican Party should not nominate any man for President unless he "has presented a program."

"Specifically, would that apply to General Eisenhower?" he was asked.

"It would apply to everyone, in my view," Stassen said.

Stassen, in the course of a news conference at the Statler, criticized President Truman directly and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York indirectly; said Americans could reduce consumption of foods 15 per cent with benefit to their health and their purse; denied any deal with Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and claimed for himself 100 delegates in six Midwestern States.

There was nothing unfriendly or critical in Stassen's tone as he talked about General Eisenhower talked about General Eisenhower. His remark, however, reflected a widespread feeling among professional politicians that if "Ike" is to get the GOP prize, he will have to speak out eventually and tell the country where he stands on the issues of the day.

Chance to Come Later

General Eisenhower will have his chance to speak out once he takes over as president of Columbia University, probably in the late winter or early spring. He has insisted that he will not authorize anybody to "run" him and that he will not connive to get the GOP nomination; but politicians, nevertheless, regard him as a "receptive" candidate.

Former Governor Stassen, only Republican who admits he's a candidate, yesterday claimed 100 out of 130 convention delegates in six States—Wisconsin, Minesota, the Dakotas, Iowa and Missouri. To win a candidate will have to have 547 delegate votes.

Stassen said he had no "understanding" with Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and he said there was no basis for talk of a Taft-Stassen ticket.

He criticized President Truman for not calling a special session of Congress to deal with the European crisis, and said "We have been dallying at the edge of disaster."

Stassen also took another critical jab at Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, generally regarded as the No. 1 contender for the Republican presidential nomination.

Back in July, he accused Dewey of failing to take a stand on major issues, and he said he "would not consider" a place on a GOP ticket headed by the New Yorker.

Questioned on Food Plan

Yesterday a reporter, having in mind Governor Dewey's recent statement on the Administration's feed-Europe program, asked this question:

"Governor, do you find anything in the Government's food conservation program to suggest that it might endanger the health or produce inadequate nourishment for the American people?"

"Of course not," Stassen replied.

He went on to say that the American people, with some exceptions, have been eating more in the last year than at any time in their history. The exceptions, he said, were pensioners and those in the lower-paid white collar groups.

"Taking it on the average," Stassen said, "the American family can decrease their consumption of vital foods 15 per cent, improve their health, and bring down food prices."

He said the Truman-Luckman food-saving program would work if it is backed "by leaders in both parties without quibbling on details or endeavoring to make political capital out of the issue . . ."

"Governor," he was asked, "can you give an example of quibbling?"

"No," he said, "I think you can do that as well as I can."

Dewey Seen as Target

"Do you regard Governor Dewey's statement the other day as quibbling on the food program?"

"I would prefer that statement to be interpreted by the press, rather than by myself."

The reporters took it for granted that Governor Dewey was his target.

He was asked if he included General Eisenhower among his "rivals" for the Republican nomination.

"I don't recognize any rivals," Stassen said. "I think anyone in the country is entitled to run, and I hope that the people and the members of the Republican Party will ultimately select the nominees on the basis of programs presented."

"You don't think the convention ought to select a man unless he has presented a program?"

"That's right," Stassen said, and he went on to say that it applied to everyone, including General Eisenhower.

Stassen announced a speaking tour in November that would take him into the Mountain States, another swing through the South, a speech in Chicago, and then the "climax" of this phase, a major speech in Milwaukee on November 24.

Joseph Moody Is Named Head Of Southern Coal Producers

Joseph E. Moody has been elected president of the Southern Coal Producers Association.

Moody, at present industrial relations manager for the York Corp., York, Pa., will assume his duties November 1.

He will succeed Edward R. Burke as head of the association of 350 soft coal producing companies. Burke, former United States Senator from Nebraska, resigned last December after a policy quarrel with the association over strategy in a labor dispute with John L. Lewis.

The association represents producers in southern West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, which produce approximately one third of all the Nation's bituminous coal.

The election of Moody was announced yesterday by W. J. Cunningham, acting chairman of the association and one of its directors.

Moody, a 43-year-old native of Connecticut, is a graduate of Cornell and has been engaged in industrial public relations for 18 years. His headquarters will be at the association's offices here but the announcement of his election said his activities "will extend to the various fields of production of the association."

3 Police Probe Tale Of Kidnap, Torture

A trio of sleuths have been assigned to clear up the mystery surrounding the alleged kidnaping and torture of a Washington man, it was learned last night.

Carl J. Akowskey, 31, of 3950 C st. se., told police that four men seized him early Sunday morning, held him five hours, beat him into unconsciousness several times and tortured him.

Akowskey, father of two children, who has a police record of 22 arrests since 1937, told police his abductors demanded the whereabouts of cash and bonds contained in a safe stolen August 5 from the home of James K. Mahorney, 4027 Adams st. ne.

It had been reported that the stolen safe contained $10,000 in cashs and $3000 in bonds, but police disclosed yesterday that, according to a signed statement by Mahorney, the missing valuables amounted only to $5400 in cash and $2000 in savings bonds.

Akowskey, and his brother in law, Richard A. Cooper, 239 Seventeenth st. se., who are carpenters by trade, did some work at the home of Mahorney several months before the 50-pound safe was torn out of its wall hiding place.

Last month Cooper reported to police that two men beat and attempted to kidnap him from in front of his house. Cooper said the attackers wanted to question him also in regard to the Mahorney case.

The police, admittedly baffled about one angle of the case, are asking why four men would risk a long jail sentence for kidnaping over such a comparatively small sum.

Inspector Floyd Truscott, chief of detectives, said yesterday he had put the special squad on the case to come up with the answer.

Link Stressed

Parents May Influence Delinquents

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

A maladjusted mother—or father—may create a juvenile delinquent.

The view was expressed yesterday by Dr. Herbert W. Stein, newly appointed psychiatrist in the guidance clinic at the Juvenile Court here.

Dr. Stein

Emphasizing the strong link between parental and child behavior patterns, Dr. Stein pointed out that a child's maladjustment is "frequently a response to maladjustment in the parents." Most important "external" factors, he said, are environmental conditions.

Emotional conflicts within a youngster—which sometimes land him in the hands of juvenile authorities—usually stem from his relationship to his parents, the German-born psychiatrist said. He may be upset, Dr. Stein pointed out, by too much affection as well as too little. Or he may be disturbed by "lack of consistency" in the display of affection.

Other factors, which often seem not directly related to the child's well-being—such as the relationship between the parents—also affect a youngster's behavior.

The kindly, soft-spoken doctor, who received his pre-clinical training at the Sorbonne and was graduated from Johns Hopkins, explained that frequently non-surface friction between the parents may give the child a feeling of insecurity. Such upsetting factors as "witnessing scenes," being subjected to unethical standards at home—such as low morals, promiscuity and alcoholism—act strongly on most youngsters, he added.

He cited one case in which a "time relationship" was discovered between the occurrence of a youth's delinquent episodes and his mother's "acute neurotic disturbances."

The rotund psychiatrist, who took a part of his neuro-psychiatric training at the Boston City Hospital and later taught at both Yale University and Tufts Medical School, scoffed at the "old theory that criminals were born that way." No one, he said, is "born bad," and for emphasis, he added:

"Nothing arises out of nothing."

But he declined to give hope that every young delinquent can be "cured." There are limitations, he admitted, many of them environmental.

'Salesmanship' Urged to Fill Church Rolls

A former Army chaplain last night urged churches to use salesmanship techniques in winning new members.

The Rev. George Ritchey, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Mansfield, La., said "We are living in a day when the church must go to the people where they are." He spoke at a revival at Congress Heights Baptist Church, Esther and Brothers pls. se.

Chaplain Lester B. Nichols of Bolling Field, led singing at the services. The Rev. H. Lincoln Smith, pastor of the Congress Heights Church, presided.

All Greater Washington area Baptist churches are holding services daily at 8 p. m. and special Sunday services, through October 26, under the sponsorship of the D. C. Baptist Convention.

Alexandria Policeman Dismissed

Pvt. Fred Kaus, and Alexandria policeman with 19 years service, has been dismissed after refusing to resign at request of the Alexandria Police Trial Board.

The dismissal order, it was announced, came from temporary City Manager Joseph M. Pancoast.

Kaus was one of three officers tried last week on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. The charges grew out of what was termed a "noisy party" attended by the officers in uniform in violation of regulations.

The board, Cap. Edgar Sims said, requested Kaus to submit his resignation not later than Monday.

The two other men, whose names wer enot revealed by city officials, were suspended for 10 days.

Kaus, police officials said, was asked to resign in view of "previous violation" of police regulations. The other two, according to Captain Sims, were first offenders.

All Out-of State Divorces At Stake in Supreme Court

have made of people's lives.

People have to live by the court's decisions, Jackson declared, and they simply can't do it. Lawyer's don't know what to tell their clients; clients don't know whether they are divorced or married.

"If we can't do our job," he remarked, "there's nobody insisting on us staying here."

Frankfurter snapped back that the court could not throw out the whole background of precedent law. Jackson said he was willing to throw it out—that it was so mixed up that it was worthless—if the court would write a doctrine people could understand and live by.

The judges were not talking to one another. They made their points by questions and remarks to the lawyers. Caught in the middle, both figuratively and in fact, the lawyers had a bad afternoon of squirming under the judicial crossfire.

Here are the cases that set off the fireworks:

Mrs. Margaret C. Sherrer left her home in Worcester, Mass., in 1944 and went to St. Petersburg, Fla., with her two children. She later sued for a divorce. Her husband, Edward C. Sherrer, went to Florida to fight the divorce and filed an answer. Mrs. Sherrer got the decree, but the husband got the children, except in the summer. Mrs. Sherrer then married Henry Phelps, a lumber man. They later went back to Massachusetts and Sherrer sued Mrs. Phelps for a separation and Phelps for $15,000 for alienation of affections. The Massachusetts courts said the Florida divorce was no good and gave Sherrer a decree.

In the other case, Martin V. B. Coe, a security dealer, went from Massachusetts to New York. His wife sued him in Massachusetts and got an order for $35 a week. Coe then went to Reno, saying he meant to live there for his health—he has asthma and is partly deaf—and to get away from his wife. After a time he sued for a divorce. Mrs. Coe went to Reno, hired lawyers and also asked the Nevada court for divorce. She got it, and a property settlement giving her $7500 in cash and $35 a week.

Coe married again, and when he went back to Massachusetts—on just a business trip, he says—was haled into court for contempt, a charge growing out of his wife's old suit there. He said he had moved to Nevada and got a divorce, but the Massachusetts courts said it was no good.

Both the Florida and the Nevada courts ruled that they had jurisdiction in the cases.

But the Massachusetts courts acted under a law of that State which says:

"If an inhabitant of this Commonwealth goes into another jurisdiction to obtain a divorce for a cause occurring here while the parties resided here, or for a cause which would not authorize a divorce by the laws of this commonwealth, the divorce so obtained shall be of no force or effect in this commonwealth."

Coe and Mrs. Phelps claim that law is agaisst the Constitution, which says:

"Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State."

As the cases unfolded, the justices said:

Mr. Vinson, Chief Justice—How much do you have to dispute, to get a binding ruling in a court?

Frankfurter—If people can go to "easy States" for divorces, they will be free to shrug off the obligations of marriage.

Black—Well, would such bad morals justify us in setting aside the full faith and credit clause?

Rutledge—When State courts decide they have jurisdiction, to open those ruling to attack would put us on a jurisdictional merry-go-round.

Jackson—To say rulings on jurisdiction are not to have full faith and credit would not stop with divorces; it would mean no decision would have faith and credit, because all decisions hang on jurisdiction.

Reed—Need we determine upon what basis a State has refused to respect the decree of another State?

This sort of thing probably will go on for hours later this week, when the justices talk the cases over among themselves. The Chief Justice and th esenior justice on the other side then will assign justices to write the opinions of the court, and the dissenters.

Prince Georges Enrolls 22,021 In Schools

Prince Georges school enrollment totaled 22,021 as of September 30, Schools Superintendent G. Gardner Shugart reported to the County Board of Education yesterday at a meeting in Upper Marlboro.

The figures represent an increase of 763 over the same time last year and 1465 since schools opened September 10. Peak of enrollment is expected this month, Shugart said.

The board authorized a committee composed of Superintendent Shugart, Supervisor of Instruction William S. Schmidt and Miss Mildred Hoyle, elementary school supervisor, to meet with a Prince Georges County Memorial Library committee to further cooperation between schools and libraries.

The board voted to meet November 18 instead of Armistice Day, its regular meeting date.

Dr. Earl Berkley was named trustee at Beltsville School to succeed Dr. Paul Underwood, resigned. Two trustees, Wordie Savoy and Willie Neall, were named for Camp Springs Negro School.

School teachers were appointed at the meeting as follows: Camp Piper, Laurel High; Frank Facinoli, Gwynn Park High; Luella DeBrohun, Oxon Hill High; John De Martino, Hyattsville High; Joseph Aschauer, Mount Rainier High; John H. Snyder, Lyndon Hill Junior High; Elizabeth Saunders, Accokeek Elementary; Fannie Jordan, Suitland Elementary; Delores Bausum, Berwyn Elementary; Jennie Fletcher, Clinton Negro School; Gertrude Dunham, TB Negro School, and Lawrence Jackson, Douglass Negro School.

If Stomach Gas or Sour Food Taste Robs You of Sleep
Here's How You May Help, Whether You Eat 500 Pounds or 2000 Pounds of Food In a Year

You can't feel cheerful, be happy and sleep well, if your stomach is always upset. As age advances the "old stomach" needs more help. The reason is this:

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains very special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

48-Hour Week Requested by Transit Firm

Capital Transit Co. officials yesterday asked a three-man arbitration panel to restore the 6-day, 48-hour work week, at straight pay.

The appeal was made by Hawley S. Simpson, the utility's labor counsel, at hearings in Hotel Raleigh on contract items in dispute between the company and its AFL employes.

Simpson argued that the company is "not in the financial position it was in 1945, when the 40-hour week was established."

Under the present system, employes work 48 hours at straight time for 40 hours and time and a half for eight hours. The union is seeking a 40-hour week at a 35 per cent boost in the pay scale.

The firm's current manpower and financial situation is such, Simpson told the board, that "the company should not be asked to bear the penalty which was not expected when the award was made." He added:

"In these times of spiraling prices, it is the duty of everyone to produce more and work harder. We can live better if we all work harder."

Earlier, Samuel E. Emmons, operating manager, testified the company is willing to reclassify mechanics in the 4th st. shop from grade A to grade Double A, as requested by the union. The switch will boost the wage of some seven employes from $1.27 to $1.33 an hour.

One on the Aisle—

Children of Paradise

Paris Hit Gains In Retrospect

By Richard L. Coe

THE LITERARY SET has raised considerable hoop-la over a French film which opened last night at the Little, "Les Enfants du Paradis"—"Children of Paradise."

The film itself, it seems to me, is hindered rather than helped by the romantic aspects under which it was made—a country's most ambitious film created under the most trying conditions during the Nazi occupation. This glowing background has given the film a spirit quite apart from the picture itself.

Personal correspondents in the past two years from London and Paris, where the film has been an enormous success, have told of its glories in no uncertain terms and one's expectancy was raised to an unusually high pitch.

This overwhelming enthusiasm of Europeans for the picture suggests the great gulf between riches and poverty, between people who have lived through actual war and those who have existed relatively secure from it. Europe's social unrest and our own indecision being what they are, the same enthusiasm is all but impossible to evoke.

The hoop-la aside, however, "Les Enfants du Paradis" is a very fancy costume film about theater people of Paris in the 1840s. It is one of those pictures that seems to give more pleasure to look back on than to watch at the moment. One critic, Hermine Isaacs, has called it "a tapestry spread out in time," and I rather think this hits the nail on the head.

For it is chockful of incidents and people and it is spread out in time both as a story and as an entertainment. Originally it ran over three hours, which gave rise to a misleading comparison with "Gone With the Wind." It has been cut to 2½ hours for this country, but it still seems long.

"LES ENFANTS DU PARADIS." ("The Children of Paradise.") Released by Alexander Korda's Tricolore Films, produced by Pathe Cinema. Screenplay by Jacques Prevert. Directed by Marcel Carne. Music by Joseph Kosma. Maurice Thiriet and Georges Mouque. At the Little.

The Gallery Gods

It is purposefully rambling. Jacques Prevert has written of a number of people who work on the Boulevard of Crime, so-called because this street is crowded with cheap theaters specializing in melodramas. His "Children of Paradise" are those demanding folk who sit in the upper balconies of the theaters and by cheers or jeers make or break the actors' efforts—the gallery gods.

The gallery gods take to their hearts a strange, lonely clown of the Deburau family, who control the Funambules Theater, which specializes in pantomime. Despised as a half-wit by his father, he proves a hit just when the gallery gods seem ready to tear the place apart. He's fallen in love with a lady to whom love, as she says, "is easy."

The lady, indeed does love easily, a facility which hurts the clown much as it would a Boston preacher. Made a scapegoat by a thief—one of her many easy-going pals—she enlists the help of a wealthy count and runs away with him. The clown is desolate, marries the woman who understands him and becomes a happy father and successful player.

But love still lingers, and when the beautiful lady of independent virtue returns to Paris she seeks out his theater night after night. When finally they do meet, they manage a happy evening, but in the morning our traveler slips off again, swallowed in the crowd of the Boulevard of Crime, leaving him to his wife and career.

Infinitely Complex

The story is infintely more complex than this; other lives are woven into it, often with that fascinating happenstance that so often occurs in life. It is this pattern of intermingled lives that is the real form of "Children of Paradise."

Some of the scenes are very fine indeed—notably the ones of the gallery gods in the theater. Jean-Louis Barrault, who is France's leading actor of the moment and whose interest in the life of Deburau prompted the film, has several scenes in pantomime which are said to be very fine, but which, excepting the first, left me cold. The rest of the numerous company is effectively sinister, but I could have been content with fewer of them.

Technically, the period settings and costumes are interesting, but the film itself reflects the inadequacies of its production period by being streaked and, by our standards, insufficiently lighted.

A more kindly view is taken by my wife, a perceptive lady who always discounts everything she hears in advance about anything. "I enjoyed it," she said.

Which is, I think, about all that's necessary. Had it come from Hollywood, however, it certainly would never have been mentioned in the same breath with "The Baker's Wife," "Harvest" or "Port of Shadows."

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe reviews "Crossfire," the film about anti-Semitism, opening today at Keith's.

GLORIA GRAHAME may not play a vitally important role in "Crossfire," the controversial drama opening on Keith's screen this morning, but she looks vitally important. Three Roberts—Ryan, Mitchum and Young—are the important characters

Strike Forces Priests, Bereaved to Dig Grave

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14 (AP).—Four sons of John E. Ernst and two assistant parish priests dug the grave in which Ernst will be buried at St. Michael's Cemetery tomorrow.

Three gravediggers at the cemetery—of which Ernst was superintendent 31 years—were on strike.

Classy Clothes

Moe Howard of the Three Stooges, is wearing a suit tailored for Clark Gable's use in "It Happened One Night" in the latest of the Stooges' Columbia comedies. The suit, which graced several leading men in the 14-year interim, was cut down to size.

Hippodrome and the Warner Announce Sudden Switches

TWO DOWNTOWN theaters announced sudden changes in bookings yesterday. The Hippodrome will open a French version of "Les Miserables" today; the Warner will present "The Unsuspected" Saturday.

Joan Caulfield

"Les Miserables" is not to be confused with the recently reissued Hollywood version with Fredric March and Charles Laughton. This one runs 3½ hours and the leading role is acted by France's late Harry Baur. The film is in two parts, "Jean Valjean," generally thought of as "Les Miserables" and the succeeding adventures, "Cosette."

Because of its length, "Les Miserables" will be shown three times daily, with performances at 2, 5:30 and 9 p. m. and an extra showing Saturday morning at 10:30. Regular Hippodrome prices will prevail.

"The Unsuspected" is a mystery yarn starring Claude Rains, Joan Caulfield, Audrey Totter, Constance Bennett and Hurd Hatfield. Adapted from the Charlotte Armstrong novel of the same name, the film was directed by Michael Curtiz, whose most recent success is "Life With Father."

TOMORROW night over Station WTOP, CBS will air a discussion of interest to theatergoers. "Harvey" Producer Brock Pemberton and Drama Critic Louis Kronenberger (of PM) will give their views on the question "Is the American Theater Heathy?" The hour for the 15-minute discussion is 11:15.

OSCAR Hammerstein II, already represented this season by his libretto and lyrics for "Oklahoma!," and on the National billboard next week with "Rose-Marie," also has a current reminder of his fabulous success story. "State Fair," that tuneful film of several years ago, is back on the screen of the Airport Drive In tonight and tomorrow night.

NEWARK, Del., will be the setting this weekend for the Eastern Theater Conference sponsored by the University of Delaware and the American National Theater and Academy. Members from college and community theaters in six States will discuss plans through which the American National Theater may be brought to fruition. Rosamond Gilder, editor of "Theater Arts," and recently returned from the UNESCO meeting in Paris, will lead the discussion. Other speakers Saturday and Sunday will include Col. C. Lawton Campbell, George Freedley, Clarence Derwent, Alexander Kirkland and Robert Breen.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Luckman Wins Bout With Eight Senators

By Drew Pearson

Poor Food Czar Charley Luckman gets it going and coming. First he is roasted by the liquor distillers, the hotel and restaurant men, and now he gets it in the neck from Senators. Eight of them—all Republicans—sat down to lunch with him last week and, led by Oregon's Wayne Morse, and Minnesota's Ed Thye, raised Cain about poultryless Thursdays.

Morse

Before the stormy, closed-door session was over, however, tough-hided Luckman won the indorsement of all eight Senators without agreeing to any basic changes in his "waste less—eat less" program.

Senator Morse, former dean of the Oregon University Law School, but also something of an expert on chickens, did most of the talking.

"You obviously were unaware of some economic facts when you asked the American public to do without eggs and poultry one day a week," he said. "I'm for feeding Europe and I am sure all my Republican colleagues want to see you attain your objectives, but not at the expense of upsetting our agricultural economy.

"It seems to me that this is a poor time to ask people to abstain from poultry when cold-storage plants are bulging with it. We have 225 million pounds of turkey, chicken and other poultry in cold storage and an additional 600 million pounds of turkey will move into the market for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's business in the next 90 days, plus another 100 million pounds of other poultry."

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, who was present, confirmed the fact that this vast amount of poultry was on hand.

"Why don't you send some of this to Europe?" asked Morse.

"Well, I guess the answer is pretty obvious," replied Luckman. "Europe wants grain, because it is cheaper and has a higher calory content. Also, it might seem incongruous to feed chicken and turkey to starving people."

"Let's not kid ourselves about that," broke in Senator Thye, himself a Minnesota farmer. "I'm not trying to belittle our humanitarian efforts, but I think everyone agrees that whatever relief we send Europe will be a gift, which is perfectly all right if you have to keep people from starving.

"But if we are going to write off repayment, let's send what we can best afford, without too much sacrifice to our farm program. A lot of small poultry farmers, including many war veterans in Minnesota and other States, are going to be hurt if you continue these poultryless Thursdays.

"Your program is unfair," continued Thye. "It should have been spread more evenly over our whole economy, so that one segment of the population would not be asked to make too great a sacrifice."

Senators Owen Brewster of Maine and Homer Ferguson of Michigan remarked that they would have to answer similar protests from poultry farmers in their States. How, they inquired, would Luckman answer such protests?

"The American people have met emergencies like this before and they will do it again," replied Luckman. "We're not trying to discriminate against any one class; we are asking all the people to contribute to the best of their ability. This involves sacrifice."

At one point, Luckman, who is head of Lever Bros., giant soap company, confessed, "Let me take off my whiskers for a moment and tell you, as a businessman, I sympathize with you."

He went on to explain, however, that his program is aimed to trim the fat off young, wheat-fed fryers. He believes the public can do without superfender drumsticks for a while and let this grain be diverted to Europe.

"There's some logic in what you say," conceded Senator Morse, "and you have an even stronger emotional argument on your side. But you can't solve this problem by emotion. The State Department has got to get it out of its head that we should concentrate on shipping one commodity—grain."

The Oregon Senator contended that we should ship more dried fruits, such as prunes and apricots, now surplus on the West Coast. He also reminded Luckman that large quantities of peas, beans and fruits had rotted this year because canners, fearing a glutted market, had refused to buy them.

"Why didn't the Government buy up this stuff and start canning it for European relief during the summer, instead of letting it go to waste?" asked Morse. "Our Government food planners must have been asleep at the switch, for everyone knew that this crisis in Europe was coming."

Luckman responded that he was not responsible for what happened last summer, since the food program had only just been dumped in his lap.

"I'm doing the best I can with the materials I have," he said. I've been told to save food for Europe and that means, primarily, saving grain. I am sure the farmers of the country realize this and want to help us."

When Maine's Senator Brewster picked up the check at the end of lunch, it was evident the Republican Senators had lived up to the topic of their conversation. Their menu—bean soup, apple sauce, crackers and coffee—came to $4.08 for 12 people, or 34 cents per person.

Note—One reason for the misunderstanding between Secretary of Agriculture Anderson and President Truman was that the President had made his plea for poultryless Thursdays without consulting the Agriculture Department. On the same day Mr. Truman went on the air, the Agriculture Department had prepared to launch exactly the opposite program—namely, encourage people to eat more poultry so farmers would send more chickens to market, thus reducing the grain fed on poultry farms.

Even after the President announced his poultryless Thursdays, the Agriculture Department still liked its program better and quietly went ahead with it. Result: there should be more poultry on the market all week, except Thursdays.

Tallest Undersea Pacific Peak Found

Seattle, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Discovery of the tallest undersea mountain in the north Pacific was announced today by Capt. Robert A. Studds of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The underwater alp, unofficially estimated at 11,500 feet, was recorded October 3 on sounding devices 500 miles west of Seattle.

The discovery, of interest to navigation, was also significant to seismologists. The sudden sinking of a seamount in the Alaskan Gulf April 1, 1946, caused a disastrous tidal wave that reached from the Aleutians to Hawaii.

"We may have crossed only a shoulder of the mount, in which case the true crest will be even higher," Studds said.

The submarine summit just shades Mt. Miller's 11,300 feet—tallest in the Alaskan Gulf.

Capt. Studds foresaw a day when ships equipped with fathometers would use the marine mountains as "seamarks."

"Just as navigators in the past have used capes or lighthouses as landmarks," he said.

Owner Finds Missing Gems In Luggage

Miss Merle Norman, cosmetic firm owner of Santa Monica, Calif., telephoned District police yesterday that she had found the $25,325 worth of jewels she reported missing from her Mayflower Hotel room last Wednesday.

In a call from New York, she said the jewels had been misplaced in her luggage.

The loss was reported by Miss Norman after she had sent some of her luggage on ahead.

"IS EVERYBODY HAPPY?", famed query of Ted Lewis, will be answered with a resounding "Yay!" tonight at the Club Cairo. Old Master Lewis, his band and show people numbering 43 souls, will crowd up the Cairo bandstand and stage in the biggest nitery revue ever presented in Washington . . . Maestro Paul Kain will vacation during the Lewis stay, is all set to go deer hunting in Carolina with some plutocratic pals.

Ted Lewis
At the Cairo

Jerry Carter, WTOP's "Voice With a Heart," made an unscheduled appearance in the Sazerac Room of the Old New Orleans a couple of nights ago. Listeners tried to keep him yodeling until closing time.

TWO WONDERFUL PEOPLE are Michael Douglas, new singer in the Mayflower Lounge, and Imogene Coca, the fantastic small rascal who is helping mightily to make the new Fame Room famous. Coca touches the ultimate in wise-girl fun when she parades a collection of the rattiest furs you ever did see, describes them in a tony patter typical of style shows . . . Young Michael Douglas, black-haired and handsome, stirs the usually aloof Mayflower Lounge audience into a storm of enthusiasm at his every appearance. He's a truly splendid singer, gives the touch of the artist to each song. A "lace curtain Irishman" in appearance, his real name is Michael Dulaney Doud—of Chicago. He'll appear at the Capitol Theater as well as the Mayflower while he's in Washington.

Dona Mason of the King Cole Room is doing a new "Football Song" to the tune of "A-Tisket, A-Tasket." Lyrics are by Vic Gallagher, owner of K. C. R. It's even funnier than some of the Redskin plays.

A SMART TRIPLE PLAY gives the new Fiesta show briskness and gayety. Alan Gale bats out a collection of fresh or nearly fresh jokes. Ruth Rogers is buoyantly Betty Huttonish, becomes astonishingly funny when she calypsos "His Feet Too Big For De Bed." Youthful Rita and Allen are refreshing both pictorially and in dancing action. . . . Aside to Alan Gale. Everybody knows that Al Jolson is wonderful and Harry Richman is—different. Why don't you forget those guys and concentrate on the specialties of that great little feller who used to come to Paul Young's—Alan Gale?

Eddie Heywood and his piano will roll into the New Ball on Friday. Come October 31 the Ball will present Ella Fitzgerald. Terrific is the word for such bookings!

HIGH STYLE. A silver gray satin formal with a bustle and split to the knee in front, has just been broken out by Paula Rae, warbler with Bob Knight's Band in the Lounge Riviera. The boys take one look at it, say "Wow!" . . . Sherry Sherwood made her bow in the Rainbow Room in black, splashed with pink sequins and with a pink sash at the nipped-in waist line . . . The Madrillon's Jody Miller accents her dark prettiness with a slim gown of ashes-of-roses crepe sprinkled liberally with brilliants . . . Toni, lovely accordionist at Michel's, has a fabulous new outfit. The spangle-encrusted blouse blends green, blue and autumn leaf tones. The skirt is made of a dozen chiffon scarfs in harmonizing tones . . . A lady who really knows high style is Mrs. Helen Karambulos, owner of the Muses. She directed a modeling school in Pittsburgh before her marriage.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THERE'S BEEN nothing like the current football frenzy at Maryland University since the Old Liners slapped down Yale two years in a row, a couple of decades ago. They haven't licked much to date, but they're unbeaten to this point and there's big talk on the campus about what they'll do to unbeaten Duke next Saturday.

POVICH

Right now, big Jim Tatum, their new football coach, would be a shoo-in to win any popularity contest on the campus. After all these years, Maryland is going townward in football, they think, and Tatum isn't discouraging the idea. He's talking big, too, but more important, he hasn't lost a game yet. They've licked South Carolina, Delaware and Richmond—nothing to get Maryland into the national ratings—but with the Duke game coming up . . .

Tatum, who looks like a former tackle, is. He romped pretty well at North Carolina U., before he decided to become a career man and take a coaching job. Football-minded H. C. (Curly) Byrd, president of Maryland, screened dozens of candidates for the job before he selected Tatum, who had a five-year contract at Oklahoma U. Byrd fast-talked Oklahoma into releasing Tatum from the last four years of the pact.

AFTER ONLY THREE GAMES, Tatum has already developed a football personality for Maryland's publicists. He has given 'em Lou Gambino, a baldish back who has been averaging 16 points a game with his break-away runs. Under Clark Shaughnessy last year, Gambino was used chiefly on defense. Tatum apparently discovered he could run with the ball, and so did Maryland's opposition.

Tatum is some kind of a perfectionist. He was grumbling yesterday while showing the Maryland squad the movie sequences of Gambino's 61-yard touchdown sprint against Richmond. Stopping the film midway during Gambino's gallop, he complained, "Look at this, Gambino, you're overlooking your blockers."

"Yes, sir," said Gambino.

"And look at this," said Tatum. "You're going too wide."

"Yes, sir," said Gambino.

Tatum stopped the film a third time. "It would have been easier if you had cut back here," he told Gambino.

"Yes, sir," said Gambino, "but how was it for distance?"

TATUM'S NO. 1 quarterback is Joe Tucker who, Tatum learned with amazement, was playing guard under Shaughnessy last year. The discovery of Tucker's quarterbacking talents was simple. "Like any other coach, I had all the boys throwing footballs the first day of practice this year, and I saw Tucker making the best throws," he said. "When he told me he was a guard, I told him he used to be a guard."

He uses the T-formation at Maryland, but otherwise he is no worshiper at the Shaughnessy shrine. "You can only coach one football team at a time," Tatum said. "Shaughnessy may know his football, but he never learned that fact, apparently. I'll say one thing for Shaughnessy—he can draw more T-formation diagrams per minute than any other man who ever lived."

Another nearby college called Tatum yesterday with a proposal for a scrimmage against his B team. Tatum vetoed that idea. "I need my B club for our own scrimmage," he said. When told that Shaughnessy used to go for the idea, Tatum said: "Shaughnessy had an A team, a B team, a junior varsity and assistant junior varsity—everything but a winning football team."

TATUM MAKES no bones about trying to get Maryland into football's big league. "Mr. Byrd wants the best kind of football, and so do I. We'd rather play Duke and Navy and Penn and get licked than win over the bush league teams. It's no fun beating push-overs. We'd like to upset some of those big colleges and let the people hear about Maryland University."

He burns a bit at the idea of playing in Maryland's little stadium that seats only 15,000. At Oklahoma they could seat 33,000. He says President Byrd is leveling on the idea of building at least a 60,000 stadium for Maryland. "Then we can pay real guarantees and bring the big teams in. We're going to play Duke in Baltimore next year, and we're playing North Carolina in Griffith Stadium this year and next year, too. If we have any luck, our little stadium won't be half big enough to hold us. We don't want to trifle with our football."

I told you he talks big.

Michigan's Aerial Game Tops Nation

By Gayle Talbot

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Michigan's mighty Wolverines, in vaulting to the forefront of the Nation's gridiron powers on the strength of three runaway victories, have averaged gains of 248 yards per game with their terrific aerial attack, figures released by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau today disclose.

Employing a number of passers—featuring Bob Chappuis—Coach Fritz Crisler's Midwestern mammoth has completed 29 out of 51 tosses attempted for a total of 744 yards, with eight throws going for touchdowns, against Michigan State, Stanford and Pittsburg.

Although the Wolverines' rushing attack, on the record, appears to be much less potent than that of numerous other teams, their aerial wizardry has placed them atop the heap in total average of gains per game—479.3 yards—and would seem to validate this week's poll of the Nation's sports writers which elected Michigan the No. 1 eleven.

Notre Dame Second

Among the major outfits, only Notre Dame with its gifted Johnny Lujack seriously challenges Michigan's claim to passing laurels. In two starts the Irish have completed 27 out of 46 tosses for a percentage of .587—slightly higher than Michigan's .569—but the South Benders have averaged only 201 yards per contest and have thrown but four for touchdowns.

So preoccupied have the two big teams (Notre Dame was voted No. 2) been with their overhead games that they have given their ball carriers little chance to shine.

Neither rates among the country's first 15 teams in rushing offense, and Notre Dame is topped by at least 15 others (it says here) on "total offense"—that is, average of gains per game by all means.

Boston College Top Rusher

Boston College, whose speedy backs ran wild in rolling up two lopsided wins over Clemson and Kansas State, leads the Nation in rushing offense with an average of 353 yards per game, followed by West Virginia with 350.7 and Pennsylvania with 329.

The Eagles from Boston, as a result of their classy running game, rate next to Michigan in total yards gained per game, 463.5, with Penn State third at 459.7.

Neither Illinois nor Army, which battled to a scoreless tie in last week's headline contest, rates a call among the leaders on any grounds whatever. Little Brigham Young of Utah, on the other hand, is up among the elect, third in the Nation in the effectiveness of its passing attack and sixth in total offense.

Virginia South's Best

By sections, California leads the Far West in all-around potency of offense with an average gain of 379.8 yards in four contests; Texas heads the Southwest with 371 yards in four, and Virginia the South with 387 yards in three starts.

West Virginia leads the tabulation in number of touchdown passes thrown, with nine, followed by Michigan's eight. Texas and Iowa each had nine. Among the major teams, North Carolina and Oregon have suffered the most interceptions, seven apiece.

The 15 leaders in each department:

Total offense (gains rushing and passing)—Michigan, 479.3 yards average per game; Boston College, 463.5; Penn State, 459.7; West Virginia, 455; Pennsylvania, 447.5; Brigham Young, 398.3; Detroit, 397.2; Arizona, 391; Virginia, 387; California, 379.8; Brown, 371.3; Texas, 371; Georgia Tech, 370.3; Maryland, 362.7; UCLA, 359.3.

Rushing offense—Boston College, 353 yards average per game; West Virginia, 350.7; Pennsylvania, 329; Detroit, 283.8; New Mexico, 282.7; Virginia, 280; California, 274; Brown, 274; UCLA, 273.3; Utah, 265; Wichita, 255.5; Maryland, 254.7; Baylor, 246; Colgate, 243; Oklahoma, 239.7.

Passing offense—Michigan, 248 yards average per game; Notre Dame, 201; Brigham Young, 293.8; Arizona, 172.3; West Virginia, 165; Wake Forest, 164.3; North Carolina, 159.3; Iowa, 158.3; Georgia Tech, 157; Utah State, 152; Temple, 148; Oregon, 147; Texas 145.8; Clemson, 238.8; Portland, 138.

Spud Chandler Has Operation

Atlanta, Oct. 14 (AP).—Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler, pitcher for the world champion New York Yankees, was up and walking around his room at Crawford W. Long Hospital here today after an operation on his pitching arm.

The Carnesville, Ga., hurler, who won nine and lost four this past season before his arm began to plague him, reported that his "money-wing" feels "a lot better now."

In the operation yesterday, seven scraps of cartilage and bone chip were removed from Chandler's elbow.

Terps Always Kidding Gambino; He Takes It Out on Grid Enemies

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

I DIDN'T GO out to College Park, Md., yesterday to feel the muscles of Lucien (Bambino) Gambino. I just wanted to talk to the fellow whose 48 points in three games top the Nation in scoring.

When I was introduced to Maryland's halfback star as a newspaperman, he said:

"Say, how about laying off that Tony Gambino stuff? I've got an uncle whose name is Tony and he isn't much good. Call me anything but Tony, please."

"Any other complaints," I asked the balding 200-pounder rather meekly.

"Nope," he fired back, "everything else is hunky-dory."

There were a few Maryland coaches around when their prize performer said he was pleased with the situation and they seemed mighty pleased that he was pleased.

Last year, I was told, such was not the case and Gambino (please don't call him Tony) tried to offer and explanation.

"I came to Maryland from the Army and I love to play football. But last year I just couldn't play. I was the most unhappy guy on a squad which had nothing but unhappy guys. We didn't care whether we won or lost . . . all we waited for was the end of the season.

"This year, things are different. Coach Tatum and his staff not only do they know their football, but they take a personal interest in us. Only yesterday I talked to Coach Tatum about joining a fraternity, I take all my problems to him. He told us we ought to be careful what we said to you newspapermen, but I don't think he'd mind if I told you he helps us out a lot."

Gambino, a 23-year-old native of Cicero, Ill., is the most popular boy on the squad and it's easy to see why. He's not only the hardest worker, but he's the butt of every prank and loves it.

The Bambino's background is interesting. He was born in a rough-tough section of Cicero. Made all-city high in 1939 and played freshman football at Indiana.

George Halas, owner-coach of the Chicago Bears, recommended the fleet bull to his good friend Clark Shaughnessy, then coaching at Maryland. Gambino was all for the change.

He wanted a fresh start after soldiering for three years and Maryland seemed ideal. He was so enthused that he induced his mother to move to Baltimore.

At the end of the football year, however, his dobber was down. Didn't care whether he ever played another game, but with the change of administration he fully threw himself into football.

"I had a little trouble with him in the spring," Tatum recalled. "He was inclined to loaf. I told him he'd have to make up his mind whether he wanted to play football here or not. Now I've still got trouble with him—he's too enthusiastic.

"One of the best runners I've ever seen and he feels ashamed of himself if he doesn't score everytime he runs."

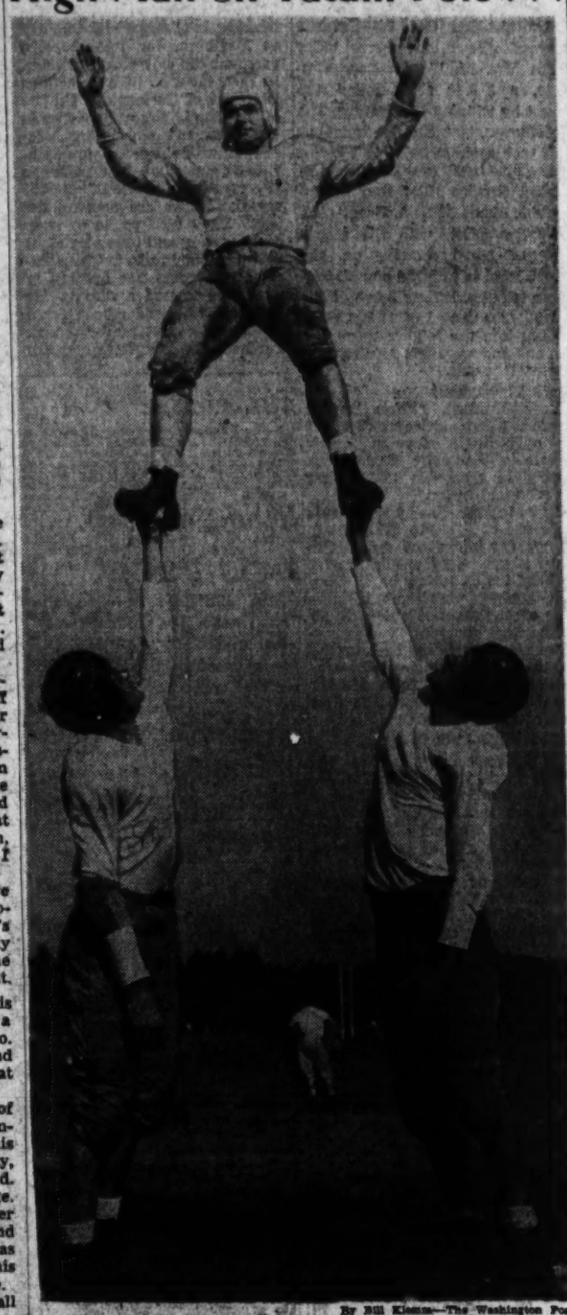
Gambino, Tatum continued, suffers from an inferiority complex and admits he's not as hep as some of the boys on the squad, and his manners are not exactly those which would cause you to mistake him for a senior grade Lord Fauntleroy.

"But he's got a fierce sense of loyalty and devotion," his coach went on, "and wants us to correct him. Wish I had more like him."

Somebody suggested to Gambino that he should have saved the eight touchdowns he's made for the Duke game.

"Don't worry about that," he chided, "there are plenty more where those came from."

High Man on Tatum Pole . . .



By Bill Kleiman—The Washington Post

HE'S TOPS—Strong-armed Maryland footballers Gene Kinney, left, and Vic Turyn, "hoist" High-Scorer Lucien Gambino high in the air to celebrate the news that Gambino's eight touchdowns in three games make him the Nation's top scorer. Quite a change from last year when the Bambino was used almost exclusively on defense

Football Contest Winner Thursday

The winner of last week's Pick-The-Winner football contest probably will be announced in The Washington Post Thursday.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 entries are being graded by a large staff of girls.

If the girls can complete their work tomorrow, the winner will be announced Thursday. You certainly will learn not later than Friday morning who the No. 1 expert for the week is.

Just sit tight and hold on.

Tribe Makes Harder Coach

Cleveland, Oct. 14 (AP).—Mel Harder, the tall righthander who has won 223 games for the Cleveland Indians over a 20-year span, today became coach-at-large of all pitchers under contract to the Tribe and its 18 farm clubs.

Bill Veeck, president of the Indians, said Harder would earn the same salary in his new job as he earned this year as a pitcher, in the neighborhood of $14,000.

The Tribe boss said Harder would be free in his new assignment to travel where and when he felt he might help some young pitching prospect, but would also spend some time with the younger hurlers of the Indians' own mound staff.

Harder expressed delight at the idea tonight, commenting:

"I think there's be as much kick in helping to develop a boy who'll win 20 games for the Indians as in winning 20 myself."

Billy Fox-Joe Maxim Bout Reset for Dec. 8

Philadelphia, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Billy Fox-Joey Maxim bout has been rescheduled for December 8 at Convention Hall due to a foot injury suffered by Maxim while training for the bout originally slated for October 10.

Dr. Ralph C. Lanclano, State Athletic Commission physician, examined Maxim today and reported the husky Clevelander had a "swelling and tenderness of the arch of the right foot.

Soviet Paper Discounts U. S. Weight-Lift Win

Moscow, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The newspaper Soviet Sports today labeled the outcome of the recent world weight-lifting championships at Philadelphia as "technical results" and claimed they were not representative of real world title matches.

"In general, the overwhelming majority of European countries did not send representatives to Philadelphia," the paper stated.

Soviet Sports concluded that America's overwhelming victory "points to the weakness of those competitors with whom the Americans had to struggle."

(The list of nations that participated in the championships included Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, France, Finland, Cuba, Canada, Argentina, Sweden, Holland, Korea, Hawaii, British Guiana, the Philippines, Trinidad and Panama.)

Marion Russel's 88 Wins Federal Golf Title

Miss Marion Russell, War Department employee, scored an 88 yesterday at Indian Springs Country Club to win the Federal Golf Association's women's championship for the second straight year.

In second place was Miss Margaret Cox of the Department of Agriculture with a 92. Both Miss Cox and Miss Russell are members of Prince Georges Country Club. Miss Cox also won the blind bogie contest with a 92-10-82.

Tarheel Faithful Standing By, Hoping Justice Will Triumph

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 14 (AP).—There was a great silence—officially—about the Charlie Justice case on the University of North Carolina campus today, and it appeared that Carolina's views would not be aired until the Southern Conference executive committee meets in Durham Saturday to decide on the eligibility of the speedy Tarheel backfield star.

Among the students, it was a different story, naturally. But the fate of the celebrated "Choo-Choo" was not to be decided by the undergrads. Saturday's special meeting was called last night by Dr. H. A. Fisher of North Carolina State College, a committee member.

The question of Justice's eligibility under conference rules was raised last Saturday by John J. Vicker, a Richmond (Va.) lawyer, who is attorney for Vernon Morgan, a University of Richmond athlete ruled ineligible because as a boy of 15 he signed a professional baseball contract.

Vicker brought Justice's status into question after a national magazine had published a story in which it was said he had signed a professional football contract while he was serving in the Navy.

In Philadelphia, Al Ennis, general manager of the Philadelphia Eagles, said today his National Football League now has "no connection whatever" with Justice.

Meantime, Morgan was given a clean bill of health as far as the Amateur Athletic Union is concerned.

Dr. William H. Parker of Richmond, chairman of registration of the iVrginia AAU, announced that Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris of New York had declared Morgan was entitled to participate in any AAU contest.

Parker, after talking with Ferris, said, "We hold him an amateur in the final letter of the word and would welcome him in any of our competition."

Yanks Top Both Loops; Nats Slump

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Major league baseball attendance climbed to a new all-time high of 19,954,832 in 1947, according to unofficial count that showed an 8 per cent increase over a year ago. The 1946 paid total was 18,534,444.

The New York Yankees once again led the field with a stadium paid attendance of 2,200,369, but despite their pennant victory, they did not quite match the major league record of 2,265,512, set by the Yankees' third-place team in 1946.

Ten Million in National

National League figures set a new high of 10,390,289, representing an increase of 1,477,027 over last year, while the American's 1947 turnstile total of 9,564,543 represented to decrease of 56,639 from the 1946 gate.

Five National League teams, Brooklyn, New York, Pittsburgh, Boston and St. Louis, and three American League clubs, Cleveland, Boston and Philadelphia, drew more people through their gates than ever before.

Pittsburgh's increase was the most remarkable as the new Pirate owners, with Hank Greenberg and Ralph Kiner as the bait, passed last year's total by 524,485 with a final count of 1,283,602.

Six Over One Million

All National League teams, except Philadelphia and Cincinnati, hit the one-million mark and the Phils and Reds were both in the 900,000 class. The Phils, the lone team failing to match the '46 gate in the National, still had their second-best mark in history, 906,868.

Alhough Detroit's gate fell off by 324,550, the Tigers still played to well over a million.

St. Louis' Browns, of course, were the one sore spot in the major league picture. Stumbling along in the cellar with several crowds below the 1000 mark, including one night game, they finished with only 332,608. That was more than 500,000 behind the next lowest team.

Moran Tops Semmler's 69

Pikesville, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Bill Moran, assistant professional at Baltimore's Mt. Pleasant Golf Course, carded a four under par 68 to win medalist honors in the qualifying round of the Baltimore Match Play Open today at the Green Valley Hunt Club.

Moran went out in 33 and came back with a 35 to finish one stroke ahead of Eddie Semmler, amateur from the Kenwood Club, Washington. Semmler carded a 35-34—69.

Johnny Bass, Clifton Park, Baltimore, pro, carded a 33-37—70 to gain third spot. He was medalist last year.

Otto Greiner of Woodholme, Baltimore, carded a 33-38—71. He won the tourney twice as an amateur.

Other former champions who qualified were Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland, 72; Glenn Spencer, Rolling Road, Baltimore, with a 73; and Walter Romans, defending champion from the Baltimore Country Club. Romans qualified automatically, but the B.C.C. pro played anyway and shot a 74.

Sixty golfers competed, with a score of 79 needed to land in the playoff for the thirty-second position.

Two rounds of match play will be held tomorrow.

Saens Is the Name

'Skins Find L'il Guy With Big Ideas

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

REDSKIN COACH Turk Edwards knows what a lot of big boys they have in the National Football League. He used to throw 257 pounds of his own around rather vigorously, so his remark about Eddie Saenz means something:

"I don't believe the guy ever looked in the mirror to see how little he actually is!"

EDDIE SAENZ
. . . Still Joe College

Eddie IS little, as pro players go. He packs only 170 pounds on his 5-11 frame, but he doesn't seem to realize he's undersized for the business he's in. He takes his knocks with the biggest of 'em, his legs still churning.

He's one of the principal reasons (besides Sammy Baugh) why the Redskins haven't given up all hope of winning Sunday's game in Milwaukee with the Green Bay Packers.

LITTLE EDDIE, who scored only four touchdowns all last season, has already scored three in as many games this year. Featured were two kickoff returns, both of 94 yards, and in the third he went over on a 74-yard pass play, Baugh hurling.

Fans who started asking, "Where's he been hiding?" can be assured he'll be hiding no more.

Off the field Edie is the quietest sort you ever met. When he does speak, it's with a soft, rolling tongue indicative of his Spanish ancestry. He laughs easily, walks a little duck-footed and likes to play the piano.

HE STARTED his collegiate football career at the University of Loyola, moved to Southern Cal because he wanted to and later to Great Lakes Naval Training Station because the Navy sent him. The Redskins hope a Great Lakes coincidence will be repeated.

Wearing No. 11 on his jersey, Eddie scored 11 touchdowns. This year he's wearing 99. Need more be said?

Married, with two children and a third expected any day, Eddie has been running a concession at Santa Monica Beach, Calif., during the summer. Now he's following in the footsteps of numerous other Redskins—going to school to learn the intricacies of selling insurance.

With his speed, getting his foot in a prospective customer's door ought to be a cinch.

11,000 See Victor Pace Favorites

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 14—Favorite players struck out here today when Mrs. M. Wood's Ever Message, a $15.40 shot, jolted the talent by winning the feature, The Halethorpe, by some five lengths.

It took a photo finish to squeeze the Christiana Stables' heavily-backed Service Pilot into second position ahead of H. A. Grant's Eb.

Service Pilot, with the scanty odds of 1-to-5 showing on the board, tried to tote 124 pounds and was a lagging, listless horse at the finish. The crowd of 11,000 piled $41,000 into the totalisator on the win end and were left holding useless pasteboards.

Leads Throughout

Ever Message, ridden by Ira Hanford who as an apprentice was the only nonjourneyman jockey to win a Kentucky Derby, was clocked in a capable 1:51 2/5 for the mile and furlong.

Ever Message won by the simple procedure of going to the front in the opening jumps and refusing to be dislodged. Service Pilot, under the handling of Jockey M. N. Gonzalez, who won with him in his previous race, fought it out with Eb for the final quarter.

The victory was the fifth of the year for Ever Message. His previous victory came in a $10,000 class claiming race here the first week of the meeting.

Challoa Wins College Park

The day's secondary feature, the College Park, went to Mrs. J. U. Gratton's Challoa, which put on a stretch run that was not to be denied. C. V. Whitney's Snow Fall was second ahead of the Brandywine Stable's Telk.

Jockey Doug Dodson, contract rider for the Calumet Farm, was aboard Challoa and backers of the pair collected at the rate of $9 for each $2 investment. The winner was clocked in 1:44 1/5 for the 1 mile and 70 yards.

The daily double paid $285 with most of the price being the work of Walter M. Jeffords' French Flower, the $46.60 winner of the first race. The Rokeby Stables' Dunninald won the second race and returned a win mutuel of $10.60.

$10,000 Laurel To Be Split Today

Laurel, Md., Oct. 14 — The $10,000 added The Laurel will be presented on the Wednesday program as a double feature.

The only stake race at a mile to be offered in Maryland, the test drew 15 entries, necessitating a split of the race. Each division will carry $10,000 in added money.

There is no law against starting 15 horses here but in the interest of safety the field was divided. The down-stretch start of a mile race leaves only a short run to the first turn.

A field of seven was drawn for the first division to be run as the fifth race and included in the group are The Doge, a stakes winner this past summer; Shivaree, surprise winner a few days back over such good ones as Lets Dance, Mahout and others; Flash Burn from the stable of King Ranch and the fleet Air Patrol. Rounding out the seven are Neddiecan, High Trend and Lawless Miss.

Comprising the second half of The Laurel, which has its thirty-fourth running this year, and to be run as the sixth race are Double Jay, Bright Sword, Brookfield, Alexis and Coincidence.

The quintet stands out in the group of eight but they will be forced to contend with the speed abilities of Flying Weather, Itacaro Briar and Dog O'Sullivan.

Bill Bennings Says

DEAR FOLKS:

Several days ago I advocated the return of the handicapper's selections to the program. An anonymous letter has arrived which reads: "I think you are wrong. The selections appearing on the programs are a lot of bunk. I think you will find the best tracks eliminate it. One day at Marlboro, for instance, the program did not pick a winner. In fact, most of their selections were out of the money. On the other hand, four horses won which weren't picked first, second or third by the program. This is one time you pulled a boner. Please admit it." I still say the tracks are missing the boat. They hire police to keep down touting and then play right into the touts' racket. The occasional racegoers has nothing to steer him toward a winner. He is forced to spend money for a tip sheet or past performances. Furthermore, Maryland fans are used to program numbers. Whenever program selections and the daily double are mentioned as crowd-getters, the tracks say, "New York hasn't either of those features and is doing O. K." When business falls off enough to really hurt tracks, they'll go back to anything that will lure a customer. Wait and see.

Deac Star Leads U. S. In Passing

Wake Forest's Demon Deacons figure to whip the daylights out of George Washington at Griffith Stadium Saturday and if you figure otherwise, Wake Forest Publicist Tom Bost is in town with a briefcase full of figures to show you why he boasts.

Mr. Bost, who sold himself on the football team he's trying to sell to Washingtonians, is very proud of many things about the unbeaten, untied Baptists. He points out:

94 Gained Against Line

1. Tailback Tom Fetzer tops the country in percentage of pass completions with 25 for 38 giving him a .658 mark.

2. Wake Forest is second in the Nation in rushing defense, having permitted victims Georgetown, Clemson and North Carolina to gain only 94 yards on the ground while the Deacs have covered 469.

3. Wake Forest wins its games by keeping possession of the football. The Deacs have run 154 plays against 64 for the opposition.

4. Wake Forest is one of the few teams in the country with an even break against North Carolina. The 19-7 triumph Saturday brought the score to 5-5, quite an accomplishment in Terheelia.

These are just a few of the figures Mr. Bost has at his disposal. When he's not speaking of the Deacons collectively, he catches a fast breath and expounds about the wonders of his trump card, tailback Fetzer.

"Truly one of the great players of the century. He's from Reidsville, N. C., and throws most of his passes to End Jim Duncan, also from Reidsville. Call it hometown pride or whatever you want to, but be sure to watch 'em.

He Won't Be Hoggish

"I'd also like to call your attention to Blocking Back Nick Ognovich, winner of the Southern Conference's blocking award in 1945 and 1946; Fullback George Pryor, one of the best to come down the pike in many a year and Wingback Harry Dowde.

"Sure wish I knew which one to concentrate on for All-America. I'm positive all four of 'em All-Americans, but we'd feel a little hoggish in having all of 'em on the team.

"Oh, yes, we have a great line, too."

So has Mr. Bost.

C. U. Loses Dunn For Jacket Game

Catholic University's gridders lost one man and gained two yesterday as they prepared to play Randolph-Macon's Yellow Jackets Saturday at the C. U. Stadium.

X-rays revealed yesterday that Halfback Joe Dunn suffered a cracked rib in the Western Maryland game last Saturday will be out of action against R.-M.

Returning to the lineup will be Fullback Bill DeYoung, out for the past week with a bad ankle, and End Pat Palmer, sidelined since C. U.'s first scrimmage with a sprained knee.

Only a Shadow

Haight Won't Despair, He'll Soon Fit in One Small Chair

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

THE MARRIED WOMAN I live with called from the kitchen, "Walter, you have lost a pound."

Now I did get on the scales, but I hadn't told a living soul how I was making out, so I asked, "How do you know?"

"Well," she replied, "I wish you would be more careful in bringing home the groceries. Didn't you notice, there was a hole in the corner of the flour bag"

The truth is I have lost 2 pounds on the "For Men Only" diet. But before I could get happy, I became sad.

I've lost 2 pounds in a week. There are 52 weeks in a year. That would mean 104 pounds from 250, leaving me only 146, with my bones practically nude.

SO IT TAKES ME 20 years to build up a personality and I'm going to lose it in 12 short months.

Now don't get me wrong. I'm not going on a mashed potato binge, like Blimp Levy, the 580-pound wrestler who used a bushel of potatoes, 4 quarts of milk and 3 pounds of butter to whip himself up a midnight snack.

But don't be surprised if I don't slip apple pie under my ice cream as soon as my 10 days in the nutrition doghouse are up.

I have one reader who is pulling for me. She writes:

"Stick to your diet, Haight, and don't despair:

"Maybe some day you'll fit in just one chair."

(See Diet for Men Only in Women's Section.)

Tech Streak Threatened By Eastern

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Those who draw up the interhigh football schedule probable didn't realize it last spring, but the slate they arranged for this year may well bring about a revival of that old knock-'em-down drag-'em-out rivalry between McKinley Tech and Central.

Already the lines are being drawn for the Central-Tech contest which falls on the last day of the season, November 22. The chances are strong that both will enter the game with undefeated records.

Central has already overcome its two toughest rivals, outside of Tech, in Eastern and defending champion Coolidge. Tech has also disposed of Coolidge and runs up against once-beaten Eastern Saturday at Central in the feature game of this week's interhigh schedule.

Must Win This

A tech victory, and Tech is favored, will set the stage for the November 22 game.

The rivalry began back in 1901 when Washington High School was divided into Tech and Central. Soon afterward, Eastern, Western and Business (now Roosevelt) were formed and began interhigh athletic competition. In most cases, the Tech-Central game, however, decided the football title.

In those days, the gib game was preceded by bon-fire rallies, parades, raids on opposing schools, etc. However, with the growth of the interhigh league in recent years to eight teams and the rise of the newer schools, the Central-Tech game has grown less significant. And since 1942 when Central last won the crown by licking Tech, the rivalry has simmered.

Pointless Foes

The Tech eleven has been the most impressive in the three-week-old series so far, having run up 69 points in its three victories, and having held its foes scoreless. Eastern has won twic eand lost only to Central last week.

Two Friday games are also on the interhigh slate this week, which finds Central and Western idle. Anacostia plays at Wilson and Coolidge plays Roosevelt at Central.

Babe Will Play Payton Benefit

Virginia Beach, Va., Oct. 14 (AP). The exhibition golf match which was to have marked the triumphal return of State Open Golf Champion George Payton to Virginia will serve instead as a benefit for the young pro, who is in a critical condition in a Chicago Hospital.

Sidney Banks, president of the Cavalier Resort Corp., announced today that all proceeds from the exhibition featuring Mrs. Mildred Didrikson Zaharies will be used to help Payton pay hospital expenses. The match is scheduled Yacht and Country Club, Virginia Beach.

Banks also announced that Walter Hagen, Jr., of Richmond, outstanding amateur and son of the world-famous professional, will appear in the exhibition with the noted woman golfer.

Payton, 24-year-old Hampton resident, suffered a broken thigh and possible skull fracture last week in an automobile accident, just two hours after he had agreed in a telephone conversation to appear in the match with Mrs. Zaharias.

Girls Team Match On Mat Card

Feminine wrestling stars monopolize the spotlight at Turner's Arena tonight, with June Byers, Dallas, Tex., and Dot Dodson, of Phoenix, Ariz., teaming up against Mae Weston, of St. Louis, and Juanita Coffman, of Oklahoma City.

Henry Kulkovich, the Californian, who gained popular favor last week, in pinning six foot eight Wladislaw Talun, faces another giant, six foot six Big Ben Morgan, the Texan, in the secondary feature. Ken Ackler, another Californian who bowed in impressively last week, will face Washington's Jesse James, in a 30-minute special, while Hans Kempfer, will meet Farro Rinaldo

Thousands See Fire Raze Warehouse

The Washington Post.

FIREMEN USE WATER TOWERS AND AERIAL LADDERS TO BATTLE 4-ALARM FIRE IN KANN'S WAREHOUSE

Two Firemen Hurt At 4-Alarm Blaze

$100,000 Damage to Christmas Stocks And Kann Building Is Early Estimate

A four-alarm, $100,000 fire yesterday afternoon burned the four-story warehouse of S. Kann Sons Co., at 314 8th st. nw., but to thousands of spectators jamming the area it was but a smoky view of fire fighting apparatus.

Two firemen were hurt, neither seriously, in the blaze that destroyed the department store's stock of Christmas boxes and wrappings and other reserve stores. Two other fire fighters were overcome by smoke.

The injured were:

Pvt. Joseph P. Anthony, 33, of Engine Company No. 16, severe laceration of the left wrist, treated at Emergency Hospital.

Pvt. William E. Schaffner, 33, of Rescue Squad No. 2, laceration of right hand, treated at Emergency Hospital.

Hosemen D. C. Howard and G. L. Larrick, both of Engine Company No. 2, smoke poisoning, treated at scene.

Shrouded in Smoke

The blaze, in the heart of commercial, downtown Washington, was sandwiched between adjoining structures, flaring out only sporadically from the roof and through third and fourth floor windows. Its chief show was collapse of the building front wall, at 3:45 p. m.

Between then and its unknown origin, about 3 p. m., it had shrouded its activities in its own smoke behind that massive brick wall.

While another employe, George Mathews, ran across 8th st. to notify store officials, Murphy ran to the second floor for an extinguisher and tried to fight the blaze, which he said had gained "too much headway."

Matthews said he was unable to reach the third floor extinguisher because flames had barred his way.

Three other employes, on lower floors, fled with the arrival of firemen from Engine Company No. 2, the first to reach the scene. Matthews, himself, gave way to the professional firefighters and fled to the safety of the street.

Between then and the sounding of the fourth alarm, at 3:24 p. m., the rush of fire apparatus to the scene brought out thousands of watchers. It brought, too, the city officials, District Commissioner John Russell Young, Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett and countless others.

But the point of vantage for watching was on Eighth st. between Market Space and D sts. nw., an area reserved for the firefighters and holders of police courtesy cards, the press and local officials.

Smoke Shrouds Neighborhood

Smoke billowed up in huge yellow balls, punctuated by puffs of flame that roared out of the roof and the third and fourth floor windows of the building front. As the fire progressed the smoke changed to gray and then black, casting a low-hanging cloud over four square blocks.

It hid the firemen, even those atop the truck company extension ladders. It bit into the eyes and lungs of the close spectators, and sent hundreds scurrying even beyond the safety zones set up by police and firemen.

A dramatic moment, hidden to the eyes of the watchers came just before the building front gave way. It brought the most serious injury of the blaze.

Barely Escapes Wall

Pvt. Joseph P. Anthony, 33, of 3 Rhode Island ave. ne., a hoseman of Engine Company No. 16, was ascending a 50-foot extension ladder at the building front. He carried a 2½-inch hoseline and a supporting pipe.

About 25 feet up, he was struck on the steel helmet by a falling slate, dislodged by other high pressure hoselines.

"It broke on my helmet," Anthony declared. "I felt a piece of it hit me on the back. Then my left hand went numb."

Anthony said companions below him yelled to him to "Get out—fast," but he couldn't let loose of the hose lest it hit them. He came down as fast as his disabled hand allowed him, fled to a distance, and the wall fell.

All spectators saw was the broken ladder after the smoke had cleared, its splintered sides and rungs sticking out like whitened bones.

Hit by Falling Slate

The slate that flew like autumn leaves from the top floor fronting also injured another fireman. Pvt. William E. Schaffner, 33, of 2013 37th st. se., of Rescue Squad No. 2, required several stitches for his right hand. He was struck by the slate as he stepped from the building after inspecting the ventilation for the safety of firemen.

Lumber Fire May 4 Had Five Alarms

The four-alarm fire at the S. Kann Sons Co. warehouse yesterday afternoon was the city's first major blaze since the five-alarm, $200,000 blaze at the J. Frank Kelly lumber yard, 2121 Georgia ave. nw., last May 4.

The $100,000 warehouse blaze, in the center of the downtown business district, brought out half of the city's 92 pieces of fire apparatus.

All vehicles of four engine companies, six truck companies, two rescue squads and one fire tower (46 pieces in all) converged on the point within 20 minutes after sounding of the first alarm at 3:14 p. m.

They filled 8th st., between Pennsylvania ave. and D st. nw., to attack the blaze front at 314 8th st. They crowded D st. and Market space to mount ladders to the rooftops and send firemen scurrying to the top of the blaze.

Hoselines at trolley tracks on 9th st., behind the fire, were mounted on bridges to permit passage of streetcars. Crowds were pressed back to the west side of the intersection of D and 8th sts., Market Space and 8th st. and along Pennsylvania ave.

Shortly after 4 p. m., when the fire was pronounced under control by Fire Chief Clement Murphy, the owners of the warehouse and Kann's department store, across 8th st., sent out 20 gallons of coffee and boxes of pastry to refresh the firemen.

Two Youths Are Charged With Three Cab Holdups

Police Report Pair Admit Crimes; One Accused of Theft Of $4000 in July

Two youthful laborers yesterday were charged with three taxi holdups, in two of which the drivers were brutally beaten after they were robbed.

Held and questioned throughout the day yesterday were:

James O. Wynder, 21, of 649 [illegible] st. nw.

Detective Sergts. Nunzio Bonarcorsy and James Roche, who investigated the robberies and made the arrests, said Wynder also has been charged with the $592 holdup of a junkyard last Friday and had admitted the $4000 theft at the American Building Association last July 12.

Two Wallets Found

The detectives said both youths have admitted their part in the crimes and announced two wallets taken in the junkyard robbery were found on Wynder.

Victims in the three taxi robberies, two of whom still showed marks of the beating, were:

Joseph Brodsky, 40, of 1237 Raum st. ne., who was robbed of $14 and his watch and then beaten on the head and face with a rock the night of October 8.

George C. Hughes, 43, of 203 74th pl., Seat Pleasant, Md., robbed of $55 and then beaten October 9. His nose was broken in three places, police said.

General Stonewall Jackson, 49, of 1242 11th st. ne., robbed of $25 October 7.

Another Suspect Sought

Harold S. Garner and Raymond Garner, operators of the junkyard at 1117 Q st. nw., lost their wallets and cash in the twilight holdup. Police say they are still seeking another suspect in the robbery.

Cash estimated at from $2000 to $4000 was taken from a cash box at the building association, 300 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Two housebreakings in which the loot totaled almost $600 were reported to police yesterday.

George Steward, 3134 S. Stafford st., Arlington, Va., manager of the McCarthy Decorating Co., 1109 K st. nw., reported loss of a cash box containing four $100 bills, $40 in small bills and two fountain pens.

Vada Graves, 1218 6th st. sw., told police her residence was entered early yesterday and $159 and five children's dresses taken from a trunk.

Boy-Dog Combination Makes Good Again

Little John Thomas Felizzi was reported missing by his parents.

Garage Solves Problem Of Blocked Driveway

St. Louis (U.P.).—Another parking problem has appeared to harass St. Louis motorists.

A brief warning painted on the door of a midtown garage tells of the problem confronting an automobile owner when he tries to drive from the garage only to find a stranger's car at the curb blocking his path.

A neighbor added, "They do it, too."

Area News in Brief

PUC to Hear Requests On Bus Service to Shops

District bus riders and downtown store owners have been invited to meet with the Public Utilities Commission October 27 to consider requests for additional bus service in the downtown shopping area.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said the informal public hearing would be held at 10 a. m. in Room 500 at the District Building.

Certain downtown routes of the Chillum, Connecticut ave., Petworth and 16th st. bus lines were either shortened during the war to conserve gasoline and tires or rerouted to relieve traffic congestion, he said. Owners of large downtown department stores now request a return to the former service as a convenience to their patrons, he explained.

"This hearing will get everybody together to discuss the matter," he said.

Welder Sets Off Fire

A spark from a welder's torch set off a very smoky fire in the Haitian Embassy yesterday afternoon.

Charles D. Ford, an employe of the Acme Welding Co., 1357 U st. nw., was cutting a pipe that led from a store room in the basement straight up to the porch of the building. Ford noticed a spark fall through the pipe into the store room and was unable to put it out.

According to Daniel Theard, second secretary of the embassy, District Engine Company 22 and Truck Company 11 responded "within the instant."

Except for a lot of smoke and the destruction of stored awnings that "should have been in the Smithsonian anyway," there was no damage.

Police said Mrs. Gann admitted stabbing her husband in their home about 1 a. m. yesterday during an argument. He had a wound in his back below the right shoulder, but his condition was described as "good" at Walter Reed Hospital.

School Advisers Urged

Establishment of individual school advisory committees is favored by five Arlington School Board candidates nominated by the school board nominating convention, Mrs. Edmund Campbell, one of the candidates, told the Hume School P-TA last night.

She said a Virginia law passed in 1936 authorized school boards to set up the groups at each school to advise in efficient school operation, and guide the board in matters affecting the school. She said the system would prevent operation of county schools as the "closed corporation they have been in the past."

Humrickhouse Backed

George R. Humrickhouse, Assistant United States Attorney, was virtually assured of appointment to succeed Harry H. Holt, jr., as United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia yesterday with his recommendation by Virginia Senators Byrd and Robertson.

Senator Byrd said yesterday he and Senator Robertson had been requested to make a recommendation and had forwarded Humrickhouse's name to Attorney General Tom Clark.

Humrickhouse has been widely mentioned as the person most likely to step into Holt's position upon the latter's retirement. The 37-year-old Boydton native was named assistant district attorney in December, 1942, and has been responsible for work in the Alexandria division of the District Court since then, at the same time sharing responsbility for the Richmond office.

Hospital Seeks Aid

W. Wallace Lanahan, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, told Governor Lane yesterday the hospital must call on the State of Maryland and the City of Baltimore for financial support if it is to continue its present system of caring for indigent cases.

Lanahan's statement was made at a Baltimore luncheon in honor of Cecil B. De Mille, motion picture producer, who presented a memorial plaque to the hospital honoring its efforts in medical research.

The institution currently receives $5 per day from the city and State for the care of indigents, while the cost to the hospital is $16, Lanahan said. He added that a delegation would call on the Governor "probably within the next week" to seek aid.

Patient's Release Weighed

Possible new legal steps were considered yesterday in the release of Ernest B. Williams, 62, after 26 years in St. Elizabeths Hospital.

A District Court jury Monday decided Williams was of sound mind, but St. Elizabeths officials said they still believed Williams should be confined.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths, and United States Attorney George Morris Fay said they had talked together by phone about the Williams case.

Tax Assessment Hearings Held Up Pending Appeal

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Attorney Benjamin Michaelson said today an appeal filed last week would allow Anne Arundel County Commissioners a reprieve from a court-ordered hearing of grievances on 47 tax assessments.

A County Court writ was delivered to commissioners today, but Michaelson, their counsel, said no action would be necessary until the Court of Appeals rules on the case.

The appeal was entered after Judge John Clark decided Justin G. Buch of Riviera Beach was entitled to a hearing before commissioners of his charges that assessments on 47 properties were "inequitable, unjust and undervalue."

Attorney General Hall Hammond and State tax commissioners have expressed concern over the case in view of its possible effect on the State-wide system of tax assessment.

Honor Guests at Season's First Book-Author Luncheon

The Washington Post

STORY-WISE THREESOME—Chatting at the reception prior to The Washington Post Book and Author luncheon yesterday in the Hotel Statler are (from left) Lucius Beebe, noted New York columnist, who recently completed "Mixed Train Daily;" Edmond Taylor, author of "Richer by Asia," and Benjamin Appel, whose eleventh book, "Not Yet Slain," was recently published. It was the season's first luncheon get-together with the writers

NATALIE ANDERSON-SCOTT, author of the current best-seller, "The Story of Mrs. Murphy," tells the audience how "Jimmie Murphy," main character in the novel, was born

Lucius Beebe Supplies Laughs At First-Book-Author Lunch

A quartet of authors—three serious and the fourth Lucius Beebe—captivated an audience of nearly 500 yesterday.

The occasion was The Washington Posts first Book and Author Luncheon of the season at Hotel Statler.

Accent on the grim—and sometimes sordid—in modern life came from Miss Natalie Anderson-Scott, attractive blonde author of the best-seller, "The Story of Mrs. Murphy;" Edmond Taylor, author of "Richer by Asia;" and Benjamin Appel, whose seventh book, "But Not Yeta Slain," has just been published.

But the gravity gave way to laughter when Mr. B. of the theater, food and railroad quips took his turn in the spotlight.

Miss Anderson-Scott Lived Here

Miss Anderson-Scott described herself as a "home girl" by virtue of having lived here two years. She told how "Jimmy" Murphy was born following the author's own unhappy episode with a drunk some years ago in New York.

Alcoholism is "one of the most awful agonies a person can suffer," the chic Russian-born novelist told assembled book lovers. "But no human being would be that way of his own accord . . . there must be a reason."

Taylor, one-time foreign correspondent and later a naval officer in India, struck at Western man's "delusion of rightness," which makes him "reluctant to admit there can be more than one view of truth." Simultaneously, he criticizedour concept of "religious tolerance."

Perhaps, he suggested, "it would be better for us to think less about high ideals of humanity . . . and try to develop a feeling for humanity. We need something in our hearts . . . which I am afraid we don't have."

Capital Called "Fateful"

Appel, who lives in nearby Alexandria and once was a Federal worker, lashed at the "name calling" habit in Washington, which has grown "monotonous." He described Washington as a "fateful city," now charged with reconstruction of the world, and lamanted that "hysteria" often prevails here.

Tall and debonair, Beebe drew guffaws when he referred to his friend (C. L. Clegg, photographer for his new book, "Mixed Train Daily") who couldn't attend the luncheon because a few days ago "he stumbled on a precepitous curb coming out of the Stork Club and suffered an attack of vertigo or Murphy's disease."

He told about a train in South Indiana, where passengers ride the caboose, the "Apache" railroad in Arizona which "dispatches all trains one hour in advance of schedule" and an Arkansas railroad which runs one train a week.

Philip Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, was master of ceremonies at the program, which was broadcast over Stations WINX and WINX-FM.

Clayton Resigns, Then Reconsiders, Capital Hears

William L. Clayton, it was learned yesterday, has again submitted his resignation as Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs. The request to be relieved of his duties was said to have been granted as of yesterday morning.

But according to one informed report, by yesterday afternoon he had been persuaded to continue in office for a further temporary period. Other reports nevertheless circulated that his resignation had been accepted, to take effect today.

Clayton's health, heavy overwork, and the ill health of his wife have induced him on several occasions to ask to be allowed to resign. Each time, however, he agreed to pleadings to stay on for a while longer.

Clayton is 67 and has been in the Government service almost without interruption since 1940. He could not be reached last night. f-dh2ezE

Your Questions On Homemaking

Will the oil finish recommended in your column of September 25 for an old piece of furniture work on unpainted furniture? If so, what should be done to the furniture before the first application? P. G.

An oil finish is recommended primarily for finishing woods which have natural beauty, color and is of soft wood which does not have the beauty of color and grain found in hard woods and so would not be so attractive finished in this way. I would suggest painting or enameling your unfinished woods.

I'm interested in the question of storing furniture asked by a reader in the issue of September 27. If this lady has a piano and would regret having it in storage, I will be happy to have it in my home where it will have good care. H. A. H.

Attention, R. L. S.: If you do have a piano and would consider storing it in this way, please let us know!

Is there a safe way to remove a stain on a gray wool suit skirt? I've already used cleaning fluid. S. W.

If you do not know what made the stain, I would suggest you take your skirt to a reliable cleaner.

Is it possible to remove mildew from a pink cotton dress? K. McQ.

First, try to remove the mildew with soap and water, rinse well and spread dress on grass in the sun to bleach. If this does not remove the stain, moisten with salt and lemon juice and place in the sun. If both methods fail, you may have to resort to household bleaches, but be sure to test these for the effect on the color in some unconspicuous spot before subjecting the whole dress to it.

When I came here from abroad, two of my suitcases were sent by train to Washington from the port of New York. I received them with my name and address painted in white ALL OVER. Can you suggest how to take the paint off? For your information, one is a brown leather suitcase and the other is light brown, made of a special material. It looks like something between cotton and leather. A. H.

Your problem in removing the white paint from your luggage is to find something which will remove the paint, but not harm the dye in the suitcase. If the white paint is oil, you might try removing it with a paint thinner sold at hardware stores. If this does not remove it readily, I would advise turning the job over to a professional. Look in the yellow pages of the telephone directory under "leather goods" for a company which repairs leather goods.

I have an end table of birch with a champagne finish, the top of which needs refinishing. After the old finish has been thoroughly sanded, what procedure should be followed to restore the original finish? M. F.

After thoroughly sanding, wipe clean with a dry, lintless rag. Now, apply two or three coats of colorless varnish, allowing to dry thoroughly and sanding after each application. Finish by rubbing with rottenstone or powdered pumice and raw linseed oil. The harder and longer you rub the lovelier the finish will be.

Gingered figs are a delicious dish for breakfast or dessert. Cook a pound of figs in water with 1 large piece ginger, 2 tablespoons of lemon juice, and 1 tablespoon thinly sliced rind, for 20 to 30 minutes. Remove figs from pan, measure juice, add half as much sugar. Flavor with extra lemon juice and peel, boil syrup down thick and pour over figs before they're chilled. Serve with cream

Cooking Authority Says

Vegetable Waste Is Appalling And Good Meat Cuts Go Begging

That's the opinion of Ida Bailey Allen, famous author of more than 20 cookbooks.

Food thrown in the garbage can in this country averages about two thirds of a pound per person per day, says Mrs. Allen. There's appalling waste in the way we prepare our vegetables, she believes.

The green leaves on cauliflower are just as good to eat as the white "flowerets," she said, and contain more vitamin. Cook them with the head, separately, or in a stock pot, advises Mrs. Allen.

Celery leaves and tough outside stalks should always be saved for soup, she declares. Onion skins and almost every kind of vegetable top, except rhubarb, can be used in soup-making, too. When you get meat boned at the butcher, she says, always be sure to have the bone cracked and take it home for soup-making. When your soup is done, if it hasn't a strong enough flavor, add beef extract, she suggested. Strain the soup and serve with croutons made of left-over bread crusts.

Many types of meat go begging at the butcher's counter while housewives painfully plank down the price of a top-grade steak, Mrs. Allen believes.

"Why kick about buying steak and lamb chops when you can get duck for 33 cents a pound?" she says. "For $1.22, you can get a 3-pound duck and a pound of Navy beans and make a dish fit for a king."

Tomorrow's Food-Saving Menu

For Thursday night dinner, the Citizens Food Committee suggests that homemakers use whatever staples they have on hand—coarse hominy, macaroni, noodles, or rice—to make a casserole main dish.

The recipe for "Pantry Casserole" follows:

2 to 3 cups cooked macaroni or alternate such as coarse hominy, spaghetti, noodles, rice or whatever is on hand
½ pound cheese, shaved thin (2 cups)
4 tablespoons fat
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon salt

Make a sauce of fat, flour, salt and milk. Add cheese, stir until it melts. Pour over cooked macaroni, spaghetti, coarse hominy, noodles, or rice in a baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes.

Weather's Right for Pounds to Fall

By Lucia Brown

HOW'S he coming with that exercise?

A brisk walk, it was, for 30 minutes each morning and evening. Or else regular setting-up exercises, golf, bowling, or participation in other sports (not including cheering at football games).

The weather's been right for the walk ever since the diet started—beautiful fall days for the most part. Today's forecast is for more of the same—the kind of weather when hiking is a real pleasure.

If the suggested walk is really taken at a brisk clip (about 3.75 miles per hour), the average man should lose about a pound in 10 days just from ambulatory exercise. Meanwhile, if he adheres strictly to the diet, he'll lose 3 to 4 pounds there, making the total loss run close to 5 pounds.

It's a food that makes fat, so the best way to get rid of same is by cutting down on eating. Exercise, however—provided it's not so strenuous as to whip up an uncontrollable appetite—is vital in regaining one's figger.

It firms the tissues and trims down the contours of the body. It helps get rid of that droopiness and flabbiness that make people look fatter than they really are. As a streamlining influence, its worth should be judged by the appearance of the exerciser rather than by the way the hands on the scales behave.

Seventh-Inning Stretch Will Slim Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

There are no two ways about it, American girls don't take to yanking in their waists, even though the styles do hug that line. But girls, a hugg..ble waist can be as American as the seventh inning stretch, if you'll use that exact technique ..d str-r-r-etch!

Stand up and reach for the sky. Arms above head, hands clasped, palms turned up, stretch muscularly all through the midriff. To double the effects, keep your back nice and straight, pull up snugly with the lower abdominal muscles and keep the shoulders loose. Center field in this stretch is from the hip bones to the wishbone . . . pull! Relax and stretch three times.

Now, try a forward stretch. Same position, arms overhead, pulling up strongly with the muscles that form the muscular girdle, then bend forward at the waist and try to push the clasped hands as far out in front of your waistline as you can reach. That's quite a stretch too.

After three forward stretches, relax completely. Just let go . . . flop forward, letting head, arms and hands dangle toward the floor, knees sagging. That gives a feeling of complete release.

Then stretch up again, clasp hands, pull the waist out of the hips and bend gently sideward, pulling strongly all along one side. Back to center and bend to the other side, and pull along that side. Four thoroughgoing side-benders will be about right.

Don't Overdo

All right . . . if you are not on daily terms with calisthenics, better stop right here. That is enough for one day. Right now you may feel like continuing, but you won't tomorrow.

Those who can take it should finish with a swing . . . swing, using the waistline as the pivot. Arms overhead, bend forward, circle to the right, around and slightly backward and on around to the other side, forward and up. Reverse the circle. Make four complete circles, exercising slowly. Throughout keep a tight grip on the girdle muscles and keep hips tucked under to center the action smack on the waist.

Follow this by relaxing . . . bend forward, knees sagging and bob up and down a time or two, like a rag doll.

Elizabeth Prefers Food As Wedding Gift

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DO YOU feel the urge to send Princess Elizabeth a wedding present? Be careful if you do, for royalty doesn't accept gifts willy-nilly. Permission has to be obtained through what is known as "proper channels," i. e., one of the princess' ladies-in-waiting. The royal bride-to-be, adhering to Britain's austerity program, has turned down many mouth-watering gifts, including a complete trousseau offered by United States manufacturers. But there's one kind of present the princess is anxious to accept—food. Not for herself, of course, but for distribution among Britain's needy families. As amateur food packing is not economically feasible, several groups are sending CARE packages as wedding gifts to Elizabeth. The English Speaking Union's Washington branch has already sent a quarter ton of CARE food packages.

Ed Stettinius recently was elected chairman of the Board of the National Chapter of the English Speaking Union and is in full sympathy with the CARE group headed by Douglas Fairbanks, jr. Mr. Fairbanks' group will receive funds, purchase CARE packages with them, and see that they are delivered.

Charles Dewey heads the Washington branch of the English Speaking Union. He's a former Representative from Illinois, one-time Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, financial adviser to prewar Poland and a Chase National Bank vice president. Mr. Dewey hopes that the recent shipment is the first snowball of an avalanche of food packages.

Princess Elizabeth has accepted another gift from Americans. A group of Atlanta ladies commissioned Wedgwood, the English porcelain manufacturers, to make a set of china painted with scenes from Georgia's history!

Quartet's Last Concert

WASHINGTON'S most melodious, most unpublicized quartet is due to break up soon. The singing make-up includes Representative James Wadsworth's 6-foot-4 son Jerry, who growls a mean lower G; the State Department's John Cates, jr., the Navy's Robert Johnson and Edwin Clapp.

Three of the four met a year ago at the Corrin Strongs' on Rehobeth Beach, found they had all sung one time or another with the Yale Glee Club and, in a trice, started to harmonize. The fourth was soon picked up.

Since then they've been practicing twice weekly, their wives sharing the fun. They sing without musical accompaniment but with plenty of gestures and they have made a great hit performing in local veterans' hospitals. The break-up is impending because tenor Johnson is leaving town. Monday, they gave their first and last performance for friends out Georgetown way.

Col. Biddle in Town

WASHINGTON'S more coruscant Poles were in a tizzy over the weekend visit of Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr. The ever-handsome Tony, who was our Ambassador to Poland, then followed up as envoy to more than a dozen allied nations whose governments functioned in London during the war, is here on brief leave from Frankfurt, Germany. The colonel had a wonderful time introducing the new, young and efficient Mrs. Biddle, whom he met when she was an UNRRA worker in Germany.

Tony's present job is liaison with the various allied missions and he's assistant to Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, right bower of Gen. Lucius Clay. Rumor is he might be offered Bill Benton's job, but Tony's keen on his work, insists he'll return to Frankfurt within a few weeks.

Tony is one of the most decorated officers in the United States Army. He's received honors from exiled governments, from the newer national set-ups. Twenty-two different ribbons brighten the left side of his tunic, a single fried-egg size gold-and-silver star glitters on the right. Among the twenty-two is a decoration from exiled King Peter of Yugoslavia; the star is Tito's choicest decoration.

Tony told the story at a dinner given by the Westchester's new resident manager, Col. Janusz Ilinski. Tito's representative, about to pin on the star, spotted the opposition ribbon. "Fifty-fifty" he sniffed crossly, giving the decoration an added jab.

Mrs. Biddle, as we wrote some time ago, has been doing wonderful work, spreading our kind of democracy by organizing Army wives to help needy German families. Her most touching venture, we think, was a series of "days in the country" at the Biddle place, for elderly men and women from Frankfurt's cheerless underground old people's home.

The Service Set

By Bessie Hackett

THERE seems to be quite an exodus in progress among Army personnel . . . Taking off on an inspection trip to Europe Sunday was Maj. Gen. Junius, air inspector, who expects to be gone about five weeks. Saturday night a group of friends bid the general "Happy Landings" at a party he and Mrs. Jones gave at the Army-Navy Country Club's regular dinner dance . . . That popular couple, Col. and Mrs. Robert B. Neely, picked up their baggage and two youngsters, Tommy and Johnny, and have moved to the colonel's new station at Governors Island, N. Y. . . Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles C. Chauncey drove through the gates of Fort Myer yesterday headed for their new quarters at Scott Field, Ill. . . . Maj. and Mrs. Harry Spitz waited until the vacation rush was over before starting on their own holiday, but today they'll tuck themselves in their car and drive off to Mexico City for a month's visit with their son and his family . . . Mrs. L. D. Goolsby and two children, Margaret and Lee, are waiting for the green light from Lieut. Comdr. Goolsby that will say he's found a house for them in London, where he recently joined the embassy staff as an assistant air attache. . . . Col. and Mrs. Richard Sims left by plane recently for Europe on a six-week trip covering England, Sweden, Switzerland and France.

Now for the incoming side of the ledger . . . Gen. and Mrs. Charles Pearre Cabell are back in Washington after 18 months in New York where the general was United States Deputy Air Forces Representative on the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations. They've taken a house at 1802 37th st. nw. and currently are hosts to Mrs. Cabell's sister and brother-in-law, Col. and Mrs. Donald Dunford, recently returned from Italy. The colonel is on the General Staff . . . Mrs. Hayward Belser, accompanied by her 2-year-old son, Clinch, is visiting her father, Col. John J. Albright, at Fort Myer. Mr. Belser, formerly an officer in the Army Air Corps, is studying law at Yale. And word comes that Ensign John J. Albright, jr., USN, recently put in from sea and is stationed in New Orleans.

Mexican Cadets Feted At Ruiz Reception

By Elizabeth Maguire

The cadets who flew up from Mexico Saturday at the invitation of President Truman were guests of honor at a reception at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday afternoon. The host and hostess were the Mexican Military Attache and Senora de Ruiz.

Standing erect in their snappy black and red uniforms, the 12 cadets made a striking line-up. Each had a small sword at his side, red band on his sleeve and gold epaulettes at the shoulder.

Few of them spoke English, but they were very courteous, addressing the ladies as "Senorita" or "Milady." The visiting cadets are stopping at Blair House. Today the group will go to New York and West Point for five days and then return to Mexico. Their visit is a return of the one our West Point cadets paid in September to President Aleman of Mexico.

Guests at the reception yesterday included military and naval attaches and their wives from the different embassies, and members of the American Defense Board. A long buffet table in the center of the room was centered with red gladioli and fall flowers, and after cocktails, supper was served at small tables placed around the room.

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de los Monteros are still in Europe, but their daughter, Senorita Blanca Espinosa de los Monteros was in town to attend the fete. Her costume was a fetching black taffeta frock with full skirt, and in her hair she wore a pink rose. The French Military Attache, Gen. Maurice Mathenet was there, and also Rear Admiral and Mrs. Marshall R. Greer.

Miss Anita Cajigas came in after viewing the millinery exhibit of Mrs. A. C. Burrows. "Her hats are heaven," she said. The hats are made of rare bits of lace, porcelain and meissen china, and the devastating result is very flattering and very expensive.

Pretty Hats

A noticeably pretty hat at the party yesterday was worn by Mme. Dolores Pechir de Moraila. It was a mass of snow white ostrich plumes, admirably set off by the wearer's black hair and black chiffon frock.

Other guests at the party included the Turkish Military Attache and Mme. Ariburun, Maj. Gen. Guy Henry, chief United States Section of the Joint Mexican-United States Defense Commission of the War Department, and Mrs. Henry, the Cuban Naval Attache and Senora de Cadenas, the Military Attache of Ecuador and Senora de Larrea-Alba, the Military Attache of Honduras, Maj. Juan Da Costa, and Capt. and Mrs. Edward Mitchell, United States Navy.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Woodward, Col. R. Roos of the Netherlands Embassy, Lieut. Col. Max Waibel of the Swiss Legation, Brig. Gen. Mohammad Mazhari of Iran and Col. G. E. Prior-Palmer of the British Embassy.

The cadets from Mexico honored were Mario Morett, Marco Barocio, Octavio Mariscal, Victor Lopez, Luis Alamillo, Mauricio Carranza, Armando Perez, Ignacio Berrera, Gerardo Alatriste, Carlos Valencia and Jesus Martinez. Their commanding officer is Lieut. Col. Salvador Galindo Ruiz. Rolando Rodriguez and Fortunato Maycotte piloted the plane from Mexico.

THE Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens will entertain Sunday for the Netherlands Ambassador to Paris, Jonkheer A. W. L. Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stachouwer and Mme. van Starkenborgh. Th. Aghnides, Greek representative to U. N., chairman of the advisory committee for administrative and budgetary questions, will also be a guest of honor at the fete. The van Starkenborghs came to this country to attend the wedding of their daughter, the former Miss Christine van Starkenborgh. Her marriage to Fendall M. Clagett took place in Baltimore September 15.

Prepare for Higher Bracket

Gone with the war are the days when a two-finger typist could hope to land a good job. Now you have to type fast and accurately—in other words, by touch—if you want to get a job.

Why not do what so many other smart girls are doing—teach yourself touch-typing at home? A chart shows you where to put your fingers; exercises quickly get you used to the keyboard.

The idea in touch-typing is for each finger to have a "home" key from which it reaches to other keys. "Home" keys for the left hand are, a, s, d, f; for the right hand—j, k, l, semicolon. Thumbs rest on the space bar. With each finger assigned certain duties, there's no chance of confusion or inaccuracy.

Prepare for a good job with the help of our Reader Service booklet No. 13. It has a keyboard chart, practice drills and exercises. Chapters on social letters, official and business letters, statistical typing, manuscripts.

Send 25 cents (coin) for "Touch Type-writing Self-Taught" to The Washington Post Reader Service, 243 West 17th st., New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address with zone, booklet title and No. 13.

Although Lavishing Affection on His Bride, Who Expects a Child in the Spring, Man Admits Feeling 'Tied' and Talks of Divorce

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young wife, 20 years old, I have been married a few months only—since last July. Now my husband wants a divorce. He says he isn't happy; that he feels tied down.

We are expecting a baby in late April, and is it asking too much of my husband to postpone divorce until after the baby is born? He is still very affectionate with me, and always tells me how sweet and good I am. I love him very much, although nowadays I spend most of my time crying.

We are living with his parents and I try not to cry in his mother's presence, for I think she is a wonderful person. Incidentally, my crying spells didn't start until after he started asking about divorce. He said if I didn't want a divorce he would get a rented place for us to live and he would try to make a go of it.

Please tell me whether I should or shouldn't give him a divorce before the baby is born. I am hoping the baby will make us closer.

K. L.

Man's Afraid Of Adult Role

DEAR K. L.: Your husband's desire for divorce is indicative of fear, not loss of love for you. Now that he has taken a wife and begot a child, he is suddenly overcome by panic at the realization—or so he feels—that he has burned the bridges to carefree youth behind him.

Hence his terrorized impulse is to repudiate these adult-type commitments and run for his life, as it were, back to the pastures of yesteryear. Which means that his parents, kindly disposed though they may be, have failed to instill stout character or the foundations of real manhood in him.

However, his offer to find a rented place and try to make a go of marriage suggests that his heart is right, though his mind is distracted; and in my opinion, this is the course you ought to take together, in the indomitable spirit our forefathers displayed when it was the custom of newlyweds to head confidently toward new frontiers—ready to test their resourcefulness against any risks and trials that lay in wait.

Forward March Conquers Fear

IT IS an axiom of psychology that "Emotion follows action," and by bravely striking out to stand on his own feet and learn-by-doing how to be a man among men in the role of family head, your husband will be taking practical steps necessary to conquer irrational fear.

As his reward, he should gradually discover a new sense of power, peace and zest-for-living growing in him. But as a safeguard against recurrent waves of demoralizing panic in the early stages of this exercise in character-growth, he ought to confide his present panic state to a psychiatrically trained counseller, who will help him grasp its central childish significance and thus dispel its terror-content.

To sum up, my advice, addressed to both, is to put thought of divorce completely out of mind for at least two years. Strike an agreement to that effect; and be resolved that in the meantime—every day in every way—you're going to make those two years a solid record of loyal kind helpful partnership, intended to give your child a two-parent welcome and decent debut into life. If you will do that, in all probability the idea of divorce will seem preposterous two years from now. M. H.

The age-old question about what a wife should do about the other woman, this time it is the English girl her soldier husband loved, comes up in Mary Haworth's letters tomorrow. Read the column for Miss Haworth's advice to the wife.

Clock

A clock is something that we use . . . To tell the time of day . . . And many are the reasons that . . . We put it on display . . . Like keeping dates and knowing when . . . We ought to eat a bite . . . And how much time is left until . . . We have to say good night . . . It warns us not to linger if . . . We want to catch a train . . . And when to swallow one more pill . . . To kill that certain pain . . . But many times it seems to me . . . That all it has to do . . . Is order me around each day . . . To see my struggles through . . . It wakes me up to go to work . . . It sends me off to lunch . . . And constantly reminds me of . . . The card I have to punch.

How to Stuff Fowl (Barring Thursdays)

With so many roast chickens and turkeys ahead of us it is well to remember a little tip about filling the bird. After thoroughly cleaning and washing the cavity for the dressing, mop up every bit of water thoroughly with a clean paper towel until the inside surface is dry. Then the dressing you put in there will not absorb the water and juice of the chicken or turkey from cleaning and be soggy in the places it touches the fowl.

Hints for the Housekeeper

Melted paraffin poured over the top of the can of paint will prevent its hardening.

Hunger might keep one awake, but it is more often that midnight lunch that does the trick.

Four Board Meetings Feature Week's Events

By Genevieve Reynolds

FEMININE CLUB leaders from all sections of the country are converging upon the Nation's Capital this week. Special drawing cards are board meetings of four large national organizations—Daughters of the American Revolution, Children of the American Revolution, the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the Daughters of 1812.

Official sessions of the DAR board will get under way tomorrow with Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne of Brookeville, Ind., president general, in the chair. Two important sessions will be held today preceding the formal opening. A national chairmen's forum will be held this afternoon, followed by the State regents' conclave in the afternoon.

The president general, who was elected to the office last spring, and her cabinet will meet newspaper women at an informal press conference this afternoon in the Mayflower Hotel. Tonight the board will hold its annual Dutch treat dinner.

Outstanding social event will be a reception honoring Mrs. O'Bryne and her cabinet tomorrow, 9 to 11 p. m., at the Mayflower, with the District DARs as hostesses. This is a traditional fete, the local society having so honored the new president general for several decades.

Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, State regent, will head the receiving line, and Capt. Thomas J. Kelly, USN, will make the introductions. Captain Kelly, whose wife is a Daughter, also is a cousin of Miss Lillian Chenoweth, former State regent.

Music for the reception will be furnished by the United States Navy Band. Mrs. Clyde H. Hamblin, State entertainment chairman, will be assisted by members of her committee, past regents, State officers and a group of juniors.

CAR to Map Plans At Meeting Friday

Plans for the coming year will be mapped out by members of the national board, Children of the American Revolution, at an all-day meeting Friday in Memorial Continental Hall, with Mrs. Donald B. Adams, president, presiding. Twenty-one of the 48 States are represented on the board. Climaxing the day's program will be a Dutch treat dinner at 7 p. m. at the Parrot Tea Room.

Reports to Open GFWC Conference

Reports of national officers will open the General Federation of Women's Clubs' board of directors' meeting Friday morning at the Statler Hotel.

Presidents from eight States will be featured on the dinner program spotlighting youth conservation. Miss Stella Scurlock is director and Judge Anna M. Kross of New York is adviser.

Reporting on the situation will be Mrs. L. J. McCaffrey, Florida; Mrs. W. R. Wallace, South Carolina; Mrs. A. W. Bruce, Michigan; Mrs. F. W. Mitts, Mississippi; Mrs. J. C. Work of foreign and territorial clubs will be discussed by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, Md., a former federation president.

Among the social events scheduled for board members are a White House tea, at which the First Lady will be hostess on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and a tea Friday given by Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck at federation headquarters, 1734 N st. nw.

Daughters of 1812 To Gather Saturday

The board of directors, National Society of the Daughters of 1812, has slated its annual meeting for 9 a. m. Saturday at national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island ave. nw. Mrs. Lucius Willingham McConnell, national president, will come from her home in Atlanta, Ga., to conduct the meetings.

On the board's agenda will be a discussion of the year's plans, including the award of a life membership in the United States Naval Institute, which the society presents annually to the Annapolis midshipman graduating with the highest rating in the department of electrical engineering during the first class year. Another proviso of the award is that the midshipman must accept a commission in some branch of the naval service.

Power Sales in D. C. Soar To New Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sales of Potomac Electric Power Co. in September set an all-time monthly record, Comptroller Harold G. Haydon reported yesterday.

District of Columbia consumption last month totaled 143,473,419 kilowatt hours, an upsurge of 17.5 per cent over the same 1946 month. Sales for the first nine months this year, Haydon added, also reached a record for that period of approximately 1,337,000,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 7 per cent over the same 1946 period.

Biggest single factor in the upsurge, Haydon said, was the unusually hot weather in late August and early part of September. With more air-conditioning units in use this year than ever before, this accounted for a substantial part of the sales gain. Other factors, he said, are increased sales of electrical appliances and more than 5600 new customers. Small commercial firms also are using more power.

Despite record sales so far this year, net income has failed to show a gain over last year. Pepco's net for the first eight months was $2,020,483, compared with $2,336,013 in the like 1946 period.

Outside of the District of Columbia, Pepco's sales totaled 21,856,300 kilowatt hours in September for a gain of 12.5 per cent. Sales for the city and metropolitan area aggregated 165,329,969 kilowatt hours, a gain of 16.8 per cent over September, 1946.

Comparative monthly figures in kilowatt hours follow:

	1946	1947
January	127,351,959	136,204,890
February	124,021,312	132,211,040
March	117,308,871	132,137,213
April	114,435,345	116,751,452
May	107,357,817	117,382,397
June	103,199,394	128,608,661
July	126,121,108	138,806,494
August	130,580,480	135,779,797

Calvert Fair Has $50,000 In Exhibits

Prince Frederick, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Exhibits valued at more than $50,000 were received at Prince Frederick today, in preparation for what County Agent Robert Hall called "one of the biggest and best" fairs in Calvert County history.

The judging will get under way tomorrow with a horse show, and will be followed in the evening by a style show sponsored by the Homemakers Clubs of the county. Cattle shows are on the program for Thursday, final day of the event.

Hall said the fair would feature an exhibit of advanced farm machinery for the first time, with 75 pieces on display.

Motion pictures on soil conservation will be shown under the sponsorship of the University of Maryland.

As in the past there will be awards for produce and domestic arts.

Woman 'Kidnaped' In Plane Refuses To Quit Abductor

Konsberg, Norway, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Mrs. Louise Forsell, heroine of an airborne escape from a Swedish sanatorium, refused tonight to leave the side of the detective story writer who "kidnaped" her "for the sake of love."

Swedish police told the pretty one-armed divorcee that all charges against her had been dropped and that she was free to return to her Stockholm home at any time.

Although she has been discharged from the Swedish asylum, she declined to leave Torsten Akrell, the man who snatched her from the institution, after stabbing a nurse, and flew her across the border with the Swedish Air Force in pursuit.

Akrell was still in confinment, and Mrs. Forsell hired a lawyer to defend him.

Reversal Is Sought In Alimony Decree

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Reversal of an alimony decree was asked by Mrs. Dorothy A. Mariani of Baltimore in a case before the Court of Appeals today.

Attorneys for Mrs. Mariani said she was granted $60 weekly, which they termed "an insufficient allowance" for her and her two children.

They argued Dr. Thomas E. Mariani, jr., had abandoned Mrs. Mariani and her infant children for another woman, and that his income was approximately $25,000 annually.

Bond Posted By Driver in Fatal Crash

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—A $1200 bond was posted today by Charles W. Phillips, 42, Bozman, pending hearing on three charges arising from the motor scooter crash-death of George S. Wilson, 16, Annapolis.

Phillips was charged, in warrants issued by Magistrate Samuel J. Macaluso, with drunken and reckless driving and manslaughter.

Police identified Phillips as the driver of a car which hit the scooter on King George Street. Dr. Elmer G. Linhardt reported the boy died an hour later in Emergency Hospital with skull, arm and leg fractures.

Patrolman C. R. Moreland said Phillips' car rammed into a pole after hitting the scooter, and the driver and Mrs. Mabel Christiano, 34, Eastport, who was riding in the car, suffered slight cuts.

Mrs. Christiano was freed under $500 bond as a State witness. The hearing will be held October 24.

The youth was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. L. Wilson. Wilson is a foreman machinist at the Naval Engineering Experiment Station.

Shop Operator Found Dead in Burning Home

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—The operator of a baby shop was found dead inside his burning home early today and police started an inquiry when it was determined he had a fractured skull, jaw and nose.

Firemen summoned by a truck driver found William Koller, 42, lying on a bed in a room barely damaged by a blaze which burned out the basement and first floor of the house.

Koller's head was in a pool of blood. Besides the fractures, an examination disclosed first, second, and third degree burns.

Detective Capt. Henry J. Kriss said he would withhold a decision on what caused Koller's death until further investigation.

The only sign of fire in the bedroom was some blistered ceiling molding. A door leading to a porch outside the bedroom was locked on the inside. Two glass panes at the top of the door were smashed.

Kriss indicated the investigators are considering a theory Koller was awakened by smoke, fell down the stairs into the fire but managed to stagger back to his bedroom despite the injuries.

He apparently was alone in the house at the time. His wife and their 18-month-old son were visiting her family in Philadelphia.

Baptist Convention Names 7 Missionaries

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, in semi-annual full session here tonight appointed seven new missionaries for lifetime service overseas and heard the recommendation of its executive secretary, M. Theron Rankin, for a budget for 1948 of $2,572,800.

Dr. Rankin reported that the missionary personnel of the board now numbers 623 assigned to 20 countries of the world.

Appointees were Charlotte Martinez Duffer and the Rev. Hiram F. Duffer, jr., of Albuquerque for Mexico; Lena Ethel Guest of Woodruff, S. C., for Nigeria, West Africa; Catherine Jordan Hatton and the Rev. William Alvin Hatton of Little Rock, Ark., for South Brazil; Anne Byrd Tucker Moore and William Donald Moore, M. D., of Richmond for China.

Annapolis Water Rent to Be Discussed

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Possible changes in minimum water rents will be taken up by the city council at a special meeting October 27, after receiving a report from an aldermen's committee studying the need for rate increases.

Objection to a proposal to fix minimum water rents at $5 a quarter for one spigot was raised by Alderman Arthur T. Elliott last night. He said it would be an "injustice" to increase rates by 150 per cent.

Hagerstown Payroll Is Nearly Doubled

Hagestown, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Mayor Richard H. Sweeney, reporting today that Hagerstown's annual payroll has nearly doubled in the last six years, said wage increases and pensions for employes were responsible.

Sweeney said the city's payroll at the start of this month was $727,530 compared with $370,469 in 1941.

Syphilis Is Curable, Says Va. Physician

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Syphilis is "absolutely curable" Dr. Dudley C. Smith of Charlottesville said in paper devoted to use of penicillin in treating venereal disease presented to the Medical Society of Virginia at its centennial meeting today at Hotel Roanoke.

Declaring that syphilis "is a major problem confronting the medical profession," Dr. Smith held that scientific knowledge and sociological attitudes have reached the state where it is possible "to wage a successful campaign," against the disease which he described as a "transmissible infection."

Penicillin, he said, "is a very effective remedy" but cautioned that in "order to get the best results some of the older proven remedies should also be administered to prevent subsequent trouble."

Dr. William L. Powell, the retiring president of the society, was elected president of the Virginia Section of the American Academy of General Practice at a breakfast to organize the section.

Other officers elected were Dr. J. M. Hammer of Mannsboro, president-elect; Dr. C. R. Titus, Bedford, vice president; Dr. John O. Boyd, jr., Roanoke, secretary, and Dr. W. R. Pretlow, Warrenton, treasurer.

Police Still Seek Woman in Slaying Of Clergyman, 54

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—Police rebroadcast a pickup order for a "heavy-set woman with glasses and false teeth" after questioning two witnesses who said they saw her with the Rev. Charles R. Vaughn a few hours before he was found beaten to death in a suburan tourist cabin Sunday.

The 54-year-old Pataskala, Ohio, clergyman apparently was driving from Appolo, Pa., to Washington, D. C.

Police said Margaret Groves, office clerk at a cabin camp, told them a man she indentified as Vaughn came into the office Saturday night and asked for quarters. She told him to come back in an hour,but there still was no vacancy when he returned.

Both times, Miss Groves told police, she noticed the woman in Vaughn's coupe.

Circulation Managers Name New Officers

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Mid-Atlantic Circulation Managers Association today named Albert P. Park of Raleigh, N. C., president and chose Wilmington, N. C., as site of the 1948 convention as it closed its two-day annual meeting here.

T. E. Roberts of Norfolk, was elected vice president; Ben B. Humphries, Asheville, N. C., second vice president; William G. Carrington, Durham, N. C., secretary - treasurer, and Frank Mundy, Greenwood, S. C., corresponding secretary.

The circulation managers also chose four new directors. They were C. B. Williams, Charleston, S. C.; Bruce Rogers, Charlotte N. C.; W. C. Cline, Richmond, and Ray Antley, Columbia, S. C.

Md. Highway Group Names Head Engineer

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—Appointment of William F. Childs, jr., to be chief engineer of the State Roads Commission was announced tonight at the conclusion of a six-hour meeting of the commission and the State Highway Advisory Council.

Childs, who has been associated with the commission more than 20 years, has been acting chief engineer since the resignation of Wilson T. Ballard about two weeks ago.

The meeting—the first between the two bodies—was devoted in the main to a review of the problems involved in the integration of the 169 million dollar highway-building program proposed for Maryland.

Governor Lane attended the conference, which was closed to the press.

The commission and council decided to separate projects into three categories as a means of simplifying the formation of a program:

Reconstruction and betterment of existing highways; new construction on new routes and extensions to highways recently modernized on the existing system, and major projects of the expressway or limited-access type which would be financed through sale of bonds.

The two groups arranged another joint meeting for Monday morning.

72 Schools To Be Built In Md. Soon

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Ten million dollars in contracts for 32 school buildings already have been let and it is expected 72 new school buildings soon will be under construction, Governor Lane said today.

The Governor explained the State's program for modernization, expansion and equipment of school plants, for which 64 million dollars has been authorized.

He said increased taxes were necessitated by the school program, the projected bay crossing, the 169-million-dollar highway program, expenditures planned for mental institutions and increased pay scales.

"The increase in the pay of teachers, to provide our children with competent professional instruction," the Governor said, "and this great outlay for new school buildings and equipment all over the State would not have been possible if your State administration had not undertaken to raise the new revenues to provide the basis and framework for it."

He said the "path of additional taxation is not an easy path, but it is the honest one. If your State government is to face up squarely to its responsibilities, it is the only one."

Fairfax Citizens Ask ICC to Review Bus Fare Boost

The Federation of Fairfax County Citizens' Associations yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to reconsider fare increases authorized for the Arnold Bus Lines.

Several other citizens' groups have already asked the ICC to reconsider the new rates which are scheduled to become effective next Tuesday.

The proposed increases range from five to 10 cents a zone in cash and from 2½ to 7½ per cent in tokens.

Luray Is Cautioned On Sewage Disposal

Luray, Va., Oct. 14 (Spl).—The Luray Town Council, trying to reorganize the town's sewage disposal system, was told by the Virginia Water Control Board to hold outflow to approximately the present degree of pollution.

R. C. Harnsberger, who attended a meeting of the board in Richmond last week, said that this meant some taps could be added, but no new sewers could be permitted to empty into the Hawkbill River.

The town is making a study of the possibility of building its sewage system by degrees. It is estimated that a complete system and disposal plant would cost $350,000, more than the town can afford to finance at one time.

For Latest Weather Forecast
Just Dial "Weebee"

The judges have finally emerged from beneath the stack of letters under which they were buried for a week, and have selected a name for our Weatherbird.

From now on the little penguin will be known as Weebee, The Washington Post Weatherbird.

McBride

Dave Groves has gone to work on a special drawing of Weebee, and when it's finished and properly framed it will be presented to Mr. McBride.

You were swell to send in so many clever names, and the judges had a hard time picking a winner. I think they were swayed in their final choice by the fact that if you want the official weather forecast you can get it by dialing "Weebee."

APRILLE SHOURES

Len Kirsten of 3909 Georgia ave. nw. reports that one of the most popular books in Washington right now is Chaucer's Canterbury Tales.

Apparently every college in the area has picked the same moment to set its English students to a study of "Whan that Aprille with his shoures soote . . . "

The result has been a sudden demand for both the original version and its modern translations, and Len reports that the shelves of our libraries have been emptied of the book.

Don't feel too badly if you never get to read it, Len. The stories are okay, but after I finished Chaucer it took me three months to learn to spell again.

VINDICATED!

The following communication has been received from Ph. M/2 F. M. Simmons, of the Marine Barracks at Quantico, Va.:

"This is in answer to the complaint that Dixie Dugan's boy friend was recently pictured walking on the wrong side while escorting her.

"According to a recent article on the subject, the gentleman doesn't necessarily have to walk on the side nearest the curb. If the lady is on his right, that is considered a place of honor, regardless of their positions with respect to the curb."

Okay, Mac—glad to see that you guys are hep on matters of etiquette.

STREET SCENE

At the height of the morning rush hour, the man's car had stalled in the middle of the intersection at 14th and C sts. sw.

The embarrassed motorist didn't feel any happier when he saw a policeman approaching. Excuses and alibis started running through his mind, but they got tangled up with visions of a ticket for blocking traffic.

But he needn't have worried. The cop called out:

"Release your brake and I'll give you a push."

And then the officer not only shoved the stalled auto out of the intersection, but with the help of a downgrade he actually got it started.

Take a bow, Miles J. Richey of No. 4.

JAY AITCH

W. H. Baker of 1711 E. Capitol st. says, "the members of our family especially like the fine verses by Jay Aitch, and we'd like to know who he is."

Jay Aitch is James L. Harte of 1828 H st. nw., whose rhymes have appeared in many poetry magazines.

COORDINATED LIGHTS

Two District Liners voice a hearty "amen" to our recent complaint about uncoordinated traffic lights. Charlie Latham of Amissville, Va., writes:

"The lights all over town should be coordinated as well as they are on 6th st. nw. Unfortunately, they're not.

"In most parts of the District the timing is far below the standard set by other big cities.

Glenn Carson Russell of 3936 Ames st. ne. agrees and adds:

"Specifically, I'd like to call your attention to the lights from the Supreme Court Building east on Maryland ave. You can't make those lights at 25 miles an hour, or at any other speed I've ever tried."

ADD SIGNS

There's a traffic sign on 14th st. nw., just south of Pennsylvania ave., which should make Brooklynites feel right at home.

"Don't Block D Street."

J. L. Jackson of 2403 Congress st. se. calls our attention to a sign on a vacant lot at Naylor rd. and Good Hope rd. se.:

"Clean Dirt Wanted. Inquire at Theater."

Todd Was Quick With Half a Buck

NEW YORK.—Michael Todd, the producer whose bankruptcy petition this week listed more than a million dollars in liabilities, was one of the fastest gamblers Broadway ever has seen. His first big gamble came on the night of his first Broadway hit, "The Hot Mikado." Before the opening Lee Shubert offered Todd 100 per cent profit for his interest in the show. Todd refused. When the final curtain went down—but before drama reviews were printed—Shubert repeated the offer. Todd searched his pockets until he found a 50-cent piece. "Heads I sell, tails I don't," he said. He flipped the coin, and it comes up tails. "I won't sell," he shrugged, tossed away the 50-cent piece, borrowed $1 cab fare and went home to wait for the reviews which brought him his first fortune.

Charles Luckman, head of the President's Committee on Food Conservation, was in Boston Wednesday night to introduce Attorney General Clark at a Chamber of Commerce meeting. Mrs. Luckman and their son, Steve, were in the audience. They left during the meeting, and by the time Luckman had made his introductory speech, Steve already had had his appendix out.

Otto Tolischus, the veteran correspondent, has just returned from Europe and says that this was his final trip overseas. "From Now On," he vowed, "I stay in America" . . . Although "Born Yesterday" has been promised to Rita Hayworth, Lucille Ball may get the coveted roll.

Louis Calhern was at the Stork Club last night, where he told of his recent spinal operation which was necessitated by injuries suffered in many fights years ago. One of the first of these fights, said Calhern, occurred in his early days in the theater. He was broke, and had been sleeping in the park.

Then he learned that his friend, Henry Hull, had just received some money. Calhern went to Hull's apartment, rang the doorbell, and when Hull appeared he told him: "Henry, things are tough. I'm not eating." . . . "That's good for you," was Hull's punch-inducing reply. "It's good for your soul and will develop you as an artist."

A group of ladies were in the studio when President Truman made his broadcast-telecast. Mr. Truman greeted them by reporting: "Sorry the boss isn't here to greet you. She's still in Missouri."

A 6-year-old boy, Michael Conrad, will have a one-man exhibition. The youngster's 20 oil paintings, including portraits, landscapes and metropolitan scenes, will be exhibited in New York at the Neriyst Galleries starting Monday.

The World Bank is sending Jack Madigan to Berlin and Tokyo.

In his eighty-first year, David Warfield, the most revered member of the Lambs Club, was asked by one of the new members: "Mr. Warfield, you've had a fabulous career and you've received many honors. What would you say is the greatest thrill in life?" . . . Warfield, who had played his first speaking role almost 60 years ago, smiled at the young actor and replied: "For us there is no other answer: The greatest thrill is in walking across a stage."
